Tax appeal is 'hollow victory', may be copied

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

A successful property tax assessment appeal may spell trouble for Anson, Hindon and Minden, the property owner told council on Thursday.

Gord Monk, owner of Monk's Funeral Home in Minden, recently won an Ontario Municipal Board hearing on his appeal for reduced taxes. Monk argued that because the flood plain mapping restricted development on his property, its value was decreased and therefore taxes should be decreased. Council appealed his appeal, forcing the OMB hearing.

OMB judges agreed Monk was entitled to a 15 percent taxation decrease for his building and property.

But Monk said it was a hollow victory for two reasons: Other property owners might follow suit, lowering the municipality's tax base; and the appeal might not have been necessary if he had known the flood plain mapping was being challenged.

"I'm concerned about the by-law itself," Monk told council. "I'm not elated by the decision because it may erode the tax base. The Ministry of Natural Resources (which insists on and does the mapping as part of zoning by-laws) and the Ministry of the Environment have inflicted something on property owners (by not allowing development on flood prone areas.) Maybe this council would be within its rights to go after the MNR."

Monk says the MNR has admitted there were mistakes in the original mapping. Benchmarks were moved, for instance. As well, many people argued that their land had never flooded and shouldn't get restrictive zoning "just in case" there was one.

"There is no proof positive that some of the lands marked flood fringe have ever been under water," Monk said. "It reeks of bureaucratic arrogance and ineptitude."

"I strongly urge you to take the part of the taxpayers and not accept what has been handed down to us."

"I can't comment because I don't know the first thing about flood plains," Reeve Ray Moore said. "(The MNR) is supposedly the expert." In other dealings with ministries, Moore said it's very hard to get action and answers. "We don't know who the players are. It's just 'the ministry, the ministry.'"

"Would it be improper or premature to have our staff research properties in the flood plain and flood way to try to determine the worst scenario," Deputy-reeve Bern Berry asked. No decision was made whether to act on his suggestion.

One of Monk's other concerns is that people who wrote letters objecting to the mapping were never told by the municipality that their objections were part of a formal appeal.

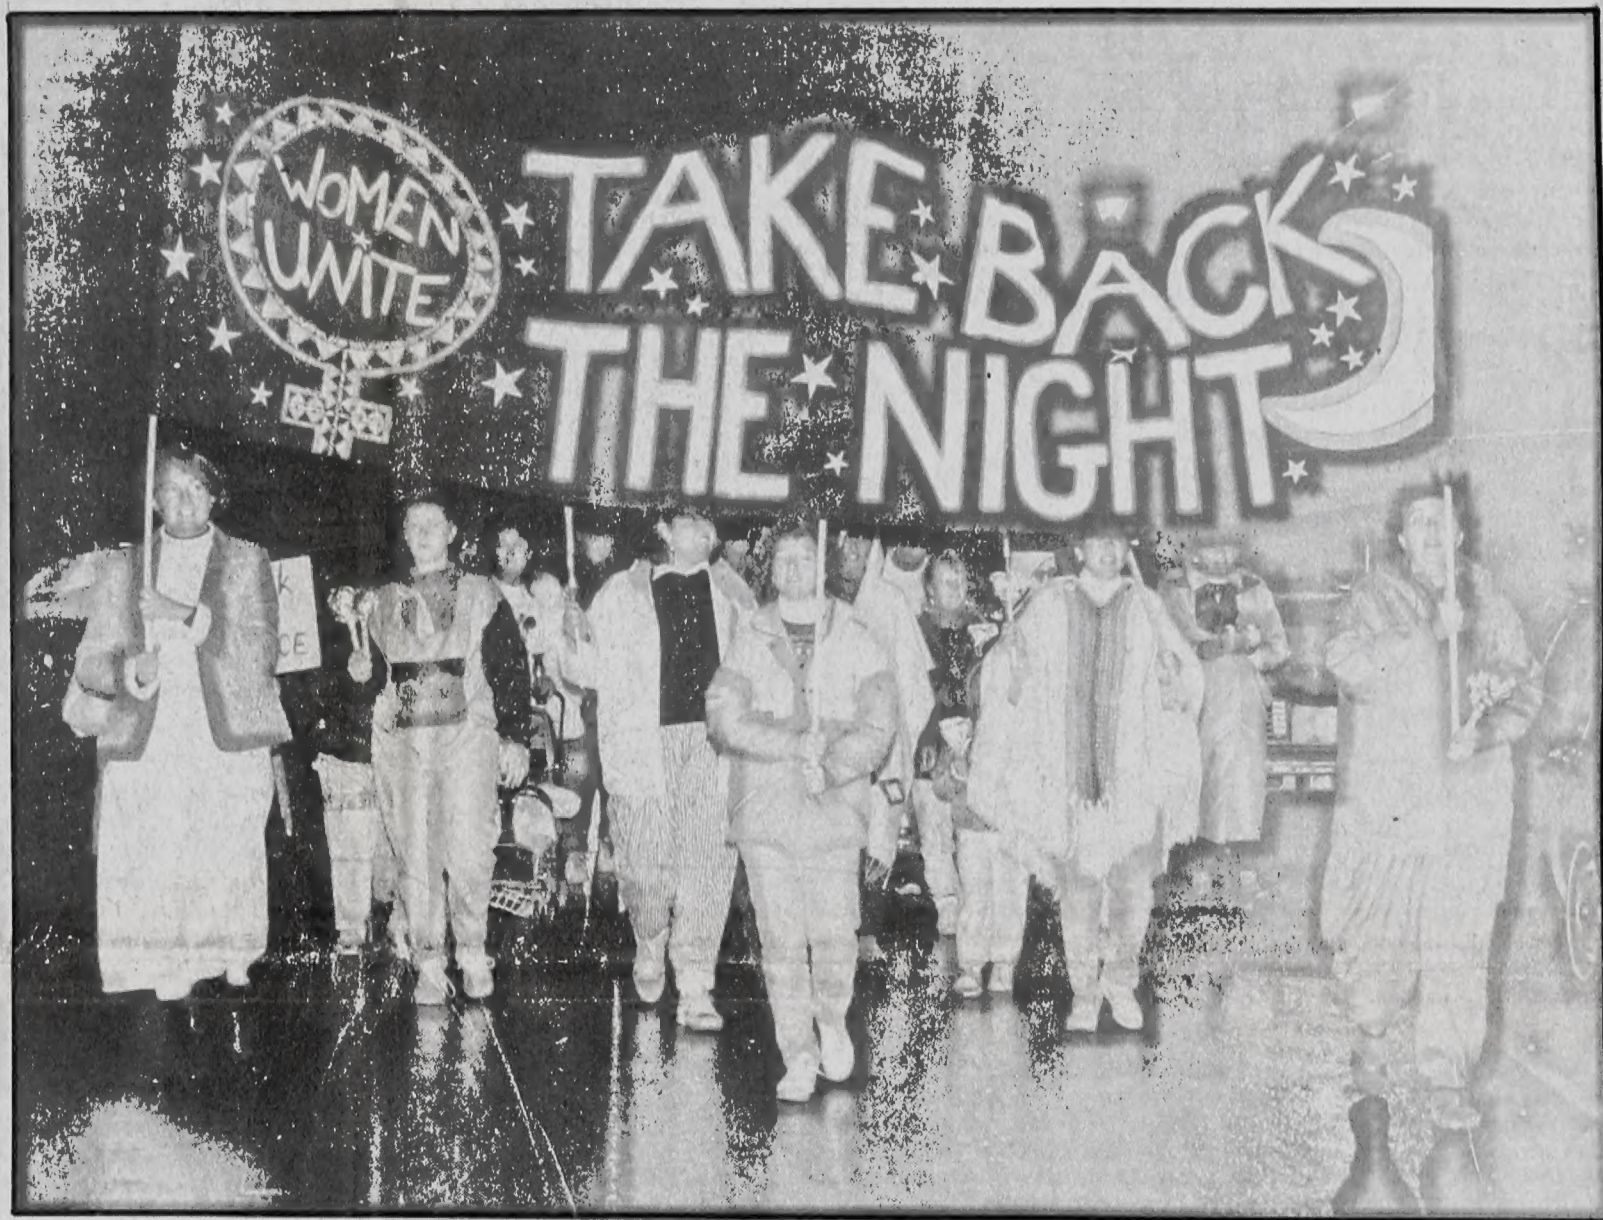

"Isn't an objection and an appeal the same thing," Berry asked.

"I would feel it would be acknowledged," Monk said. The Planning Act does not make notification necessary, but Councillor Mike Maher said it would be "common courtesy" to let people know their objections have been received and what's happening with them.

CBC frequency has changed

Starting today, CBC radio will no longer be heard on 1400 on the AM frequency. Instead, a new transmitter is now in operation and can be picked up at 92.3 on the FM frequency.

The changeover should mean better audio quality and a more powerful signal.

Women march against violence

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

THE NIGHT WAS THEIRS. And approximately 50 women and children reached out and grabbed it.

Much to the surprise of passing motorists, at nine o'clock on Saturday night, candle-bearing women and children began walking down Minden's Bobcaygeon Road. They crossed the bridge, sang loudly as they walked past the two taverns, turned around at the Fruit Market and traced their path back to the Agnes Jamieson Gallery.

Barely a boo was heard from passersby; indeed there weren't many people on the streets as rain made most people scurry for the dry warmth of nearby buildings.

But the marchers didn't mind the silence because for them it was their turn to be heard, their turn to end the silence about a long-standing social ill: violence towards women and children.

"Who's going to break the silence? Who's going to fight the fight? Stand up and be counted! And give us back the night," they sang over and over again during what organizers hope will be the first of many Take Back the Night marches.

"Why is it that the fact we are born female puts us at risk," Barbara Fraser asked as the evening got underway at the gallery. She had many questions which sprang from her research about violence against women. The abuses at Mount Cashel get an inquiry, yet women get assaulted every day and society turns its head. Penthouse and Playboy are two of the most widely-read magazines, even though they present an image of women that defines them

KEEPING MEMORIES ALIVE: This year's Terry Fox Run saw 40 participants meet at the Head Lake docks on Sunday afternoon. By running, biking or walking the 8.6 km course, the people raised $3,200 for cancer research. The fastest times were: Marcel Crete, 29:52; Paul DeBiasi, 32:19; and Terry Jackson, 34:33.

Council's duty is to keep river as is, couple says

Stanhope should reconsider selling its Beech River properties in order to preserve one of the county's last natural shorelines, council was told Wednesday.

"When bush is destroyed and shoreline ravaged, that changes everything. The beauty is gone forever," said Mary Rintoul of Echo Bay. Any monetary benefits to the municipality will be offset by the destruction of the riverbank by development, she added.

In the early 1980s, council bought 28 acres of land fronting both the Beech River and Highway 35 as a gravel resource. Only part of that land is used for gravel extraction, but it is all zoned M2, Extractive Industrial, which means all the land could be pitted.

To raise money for its new municipal building so a tax increase can be avoided, council plans to sever and sell four most easterly lots. Three others would be retained at present. It has applied for a zoning change to Seasonal Residential and the public hearing was Wednesday. Mrs. Rintoul and her husband Elgin were the only ones to attend.

Notification of the rezoning has been sent to the Ministry of Natural Resources and the Ministry of Environment. Neither has responded, which council assumes means they have no objections.

"How many (applications) get turned down," Mr. Rintoul asked. Although unable to give a percentage, Clerk-administrator Gerald Bain said approval is often given provided certain conditions are met. "In other words, they all get through," Mr. Rintoul said. "Development is bound to take place," said Reeve Harry Davis.

"That river is one of the last places not to be developed. It's the same as it was one I was a child," Mrs. Rintoul said. She has difficulty walking, she later added, and can better appreciate Highlands' beauty in canoe rides.

"Of course we realize money talks," her husband said, obviously

Country life not so simple for seniors to cope with

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Senior citizens need to be more aware of the pitfalls of country living before they winterize their cottage and retire to the Highlands, the chairman of the Ontario Advisory Council on Senior Citizens says.

"These city types are not prepared," JoAnne Fillmore of Leamington said in an interview during the council's two days of talks at Hyland Crest in Minden. As cottagers, seniors' only image of Haliburton is one of peace and quiet. "You don't know about pipes that freeze and roads that aren't accessible in the winter."

"People need a more informed basis on which to base their decision. Open your eyes a little wider."

This is the first time the council has held one of its talks in Haliburton County. Its mandate is to "further promote the development and creation of opportunities for self-help for the aged" and "review current policies which have a bearing on aging and the economy, involving employment, preparation for retirement, income maintenance and health measures, services and facilities of government".

It is also to "respond to requests from the Minister for Senior Citizens' Affairs for advice and consideration on matters relating to senior citizens."

During Tuesday and Wednesday's seminars, councillors — who came from as far as Sault Ste. Marie and Sarnia — heard presentations about services available in Haliburton and Victoria Counties. The emphasis was on housing, transportation, health and volunteerism.

However, on the Tuesday the Hyland Crest auditorium was filled with seniors who were asked to describe what life was like for them in the Highlands.

Approximately 80 percent of them were relative newcomers to Haliburton, Fillmore said. "That supports a feeling we had" that many local seniors winterize cottages, or buy new homes, and retire here.

As they age, independent living becomes more difficult. Yet Fillmore says they "were horrified at the prospect of shared housing." Two or three people would live in a house, sharing responsibilities and cutting costs.

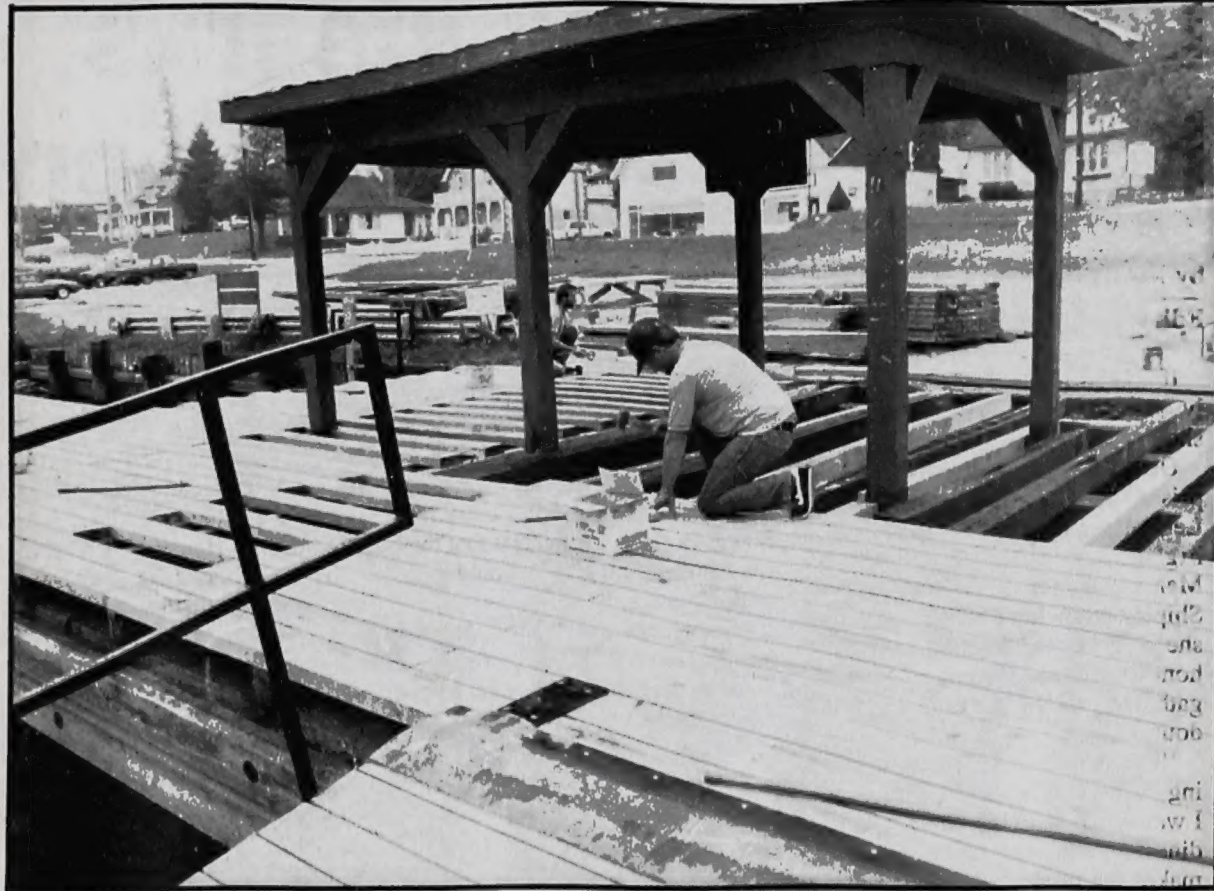

"It's working quite well where there's an agency that would do the matching and then perhaps monitor it," Fillmore says.

Transportation problems will also be difficult to deal with in such a rural area. "It was quite evident that transportation affects every other aspect of your life. But they realized public transportation is not realistic. It's just pie in the sky."

Bancroft has a bus service which follows a prescribed route on certain days. Doctors then know to book appointments on specific days, depending on where a patient lives.

When the local seniors were asked about palliative care, many didn't know there was such a thing, Fillmore said. On Wednesday afternoon, Verna Konyer and Ena Hall

A WELCOME SIGHT: Haliburton's government dock got a major facelift last week when contractors hired by Parks Canada brought in new ramps and nailed down new, three inch thick decking. The dock had been in poor shape due to heavy use and the ravages of ice and snow. The boat launch was also improved.

Twelve Mile Lake Road not likely to be closed

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

A couple's dissenting voice has vetoed a proposed plan to close part of the Twelve Mile Lake Road.

Jake Fowell and Gail Abrams said they would not support closing the lakeshore road between Highway 35 and the Twelve Mile Church.

"The road serves as a vital, social and scenic pedestrian as well as vehicular link to families further down the road past the church," Fowell said in a presentation to Anson, Hindon and Minden council Thursday morning. "If the road was closed, 'then all of the enjoyment now experienced by all those cyclists, walkers, joggers, children on bikes, moms pushing baby strollers, folks walking their dogs, and horses and wagons, would be forever lost."

Because the Ministry of Transportation said unanimous approval of all property owners abutting the road was necessary to grant closure, the road will remain open.

Closure was first suggested by the four other property owners along the stretch of road. At the August 10 council meeting, they said that a 1935 by-law closed the road in exchange for property to build Highway 35. However, the reeve at the time, Frank Welch, was also the local undertaker and he liked to use the road for funeral processions. The by-law was never enacted.

At the August meeting, the owners said the road was heavily travelled and there were safety, as well as shoreline erosion, concerns. But Fowell said Thursday that in his discussions with the owners, they felt if the road was closed ownership would revert back to them. This would increase their property values and Fowell said the plan was to allow no-one else access.

Increased property values "doesn't mean diddly to you if you don't want to sell your property," Fowell said. He's been at the lake since 1945.

Fowell said that because the by-law has not been enacted for more than 20 years, and the municipality has maintained the road using public funds, the 1935 by-law is null and void.

Reeve Ray Moore took this to mean that any by-law older than 20 years was no longer valid. Fowell said that the 20-year prescriptive easement rule depends on the situation, not the age of the by-law. Moore wants legal opinion over who owns the road.

DISCUSSING THE ISSUES: On Tuesday and Wednesday, members of the Ontario Advisory Council on Senior Citizens gathered at Hyland Crest in Minden. On Tuesday they heard presentations from various service providers, including Donna Pacey, at left, of Haliburton County Home Support Services. JoAnne Fillmore of Leamington, centre, is chairman of the council and Bill Arnpur of Lindsay is a vice-chairman.

Long-time volunteer is honoured by the Legion

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

If Haliburton has an angel, surely the wings are pinned on the shoulders of Jan Shipley.

On Sunday afternoon, a very surprised President of Branch 129 Legion Auxiliary was given the highest award: the Legion Meritorious Service Award. Mrs. Shipley might have wondered what she'd done to deserve such an honour, but the dozens of people gathered at the Legion had no doubts.

"I'm very humble (about receiving the award) because I didn't feel I was doing anything out of the ordinary," she said afterwards. "It makes me proud to be part of this community, proud to be a citizen of Canada."

Mrs. Shipley was invited to become an Auxiliary member in 1952 by Isobel Fearnley, who befriended Jan and Earl Shipley when they moved to Englehart in Northern Ontario. Mr. Shipley had served in the army during World War II and was a stalwart Legionnaire.

"Legion was my husband's life and that was something we were able to share together," Mrs. Shipley said of the instant bond she felt to the organization.

While in Englehart, she served the Auxiliary's executive as secretary, second and first vice-president. In 1958, the Shipleys decided to move to Haliburton where he became the liquor store's first manager. Haliburton seemed a good halfway point between his family in Englehart and hers in Buffalo, although at first they were planning to stay for only three or four years.

Nine years later, Mrs. Shipley became Branch 129's secretary, a position she held for 18 years, before being chosen president in 1986. She's been president ever since.

But that's only a small part of the reason she was given the award. Ever since December, Jean Marsh has quietly been gathering information and letters of support for the application. (It must be accepted by the Auxiliary's provincial command, the Legion's provincial command, and the Legion's Dominion command.)

Here is the list of achievements Mrs. Marsh was able to gather. Hold your breath:

Mrs. Shipley was on the Legion's building committee from 1975 to 1978 to oversee the addition of the auditorium; she visits the Legion's sick; in 1982, she became a life member; she organized the popular flea markets; she's on the property committee and helps with honours, awards, sports and catering; she's been a member of the colour party; she organized booths for the Bluegrass Festival and helped with the Blood Donors Clinic; in 1989 she became a member of the Haliburton Legion; for 10 years she's been the secretary of the Haliburton Housing Committee, which oversaw the building of Parklane Apartments and the planning of another seniors complex; she volunteers at Extendicare; she's an elder at the Haliburton United Church where she served as secretary of the UCW (of which she's a life member), assisted with Sunday School, was church organist, helped with the CGIT, and is a choir member; she's helped serve Rotary Club meals; was on the Haliburton Figure Skating Club executive between 1970 and 1978, organizing the carnival for three of those years; and she volunteers for the Cancer Society.

"She is a very, very faithful woman to her community and very, very deserving of this award," Mrs. Marsh says. Gathered to help celebrate were Mrs. Shipley's three daughters and their families, her sister and Mrs. Fearnley. Also present with citations were MP Bill Scott, who helped Mrs. Shipley with

A MOMENT OF PRIDE: For quite some time, Phyllis Montemiglia, above on left, was one of the only people in the area to be awarded the Legion Meritorious Service Award. That changed on Sunday when the 1st Vice-president of the Ladies Auxiliary Ontario Command bestowed the honours on Jan Shipley, right, the president of the Haliburton Ladies Auxiliary. The award came as a complete surprise to Mrs. Shipley.

IN FULL COLOUR: The Haliburton Legion Branch 129 Colour Party arrives at the doors of St. George's Anglican Church on Sunday as a flourishing way to begin Legion Week. An entire day of activities were planned to celebrate the Legion's achievements and valued role in the community.

the paperwork to become a Canadian citizen in 1974, MPP Dennis Drainville, Dysart Reeve and Councillor Bill Davis and Murray Fearnley.

"It was altogether just a special, special time," Mrs. Shipley says. "I don't know when I'll ever come back down to earth."

Born in the United States in 1937, Mrs. Shipley first heard of Canada from her mother, who was raised in Englehart where she went to school with Earl Shipley's older sisters. One day in 1951, Mr. Shipley's relatives asked young Jan "Why don't you come up north on a holiday?" The train broke down in Temagami and Earl Shipley had to come to pick up Jan and her girlfriend. When Jan went home, they began corresponding and after a visit during the Christmas holidays, "I got my diamond and we were married the next year."

Moving to Canada was not an adjustment because of the fine things she had heard from her mother; moving from Buffalo to a small town took a bit of getting used to.

At first they lived with Mr. Shipley's parents in Englehart. "There was one tap with running water, a woodstove to cook on and an outhouse. The biggest problem was learning how to cook on a woodstove, which I had never done before. . . We used to play poker at night using matchsticks (to bet with) because we didn't have a television."

Desiring advancement, in 1958 the Shipleys had a choice of moving to Haliburton, Bobcaygeon, Port Perry or Bala. Haliburton was a good driving distance between Buffalo and Englehart so here they moved with daughters Rene (the e is pronounced), Nancy and Kathy.

"The town has been very, very good to us and just a great place to be," she says so many years later. Within two days someone was at their door welcoming them to the community — and beginning what was to be the start of years of dedication to it. "You're a nice young person, let's get you involved," she was told (and probably tells young women today.)

Because she wasn't working outside the home, Mrs. Shipley had time to join in the various groups. And anything that her daughters took a shining to, usually found their mother getting involved, too.

"If the community could support these organizations, the least I could do was help them do it," she says. "I suppose it roots back to my mother, who was a very loving, warm, giving person. (Being active) was the way it was. You just got involved and it became a way of life."

When asked why the Legion is so important to her, Mrs. Shipley says: "A sense of pride in this country and what it stands for, a sense of comradeship you don't receive any other place, a binding together."

"It's a very human organization. They're there for each other no matter what the circumstances are. Earl felt the same way. When you've been in the service and come back as a veteran, it becomes even more to you. I'm not a veteran but there is that special feeling that catches you up with its aims and objectives."

Her acceptance of Sunday's award was tinged with sadness because her husband wasn't with her. He died earlier in the year, although he did know that Mrs. Shipley would be receiving the honours.

It was the presence of the rest of her family that tipped her off that something was afoot. Just by coincidence, her friend, daughters and sister all arrived on the same weekend. Sunday began with a service at St. George's Anglican Church, then they all went to the only by their sex. When a woman seeks refuge from her abusive partner, neighbours are more fascinated by the television cameras which try to record the scene.

Women confront the darkness

"As I read I only came with more questions and I was outraged," Fraser said, nervous about speaking publicly about an issue society has deemed a personal, and isolated, matter. She didn't want to talk about statistics because "one assault of any kind is too many."

As organizers questioned "What do we do to speak out?", Fraser said it didn't matter whether five or 50 women attended the first Take Back the Night march. "Being here is the first step (which) will help end violence against women."

She suggested that people don't keep their anger to themselves. They should write letters to the editor, and to their political representatives, to let them know time has come for new attitudes. Quoting from a poem, she said "May tonight symbolize the peace we will some day have every day and every night."

To find that peace, people must first confront the darkness inside of their own souls, said Beth Zwecher, whose moving testimonial touched everyone in the crowded room.

"I offer you what's in my own heart," she began, telling of how she first tried to ignore the circumstances which first shaped her life, and then had to confront them.

Peeling back the layers of grief and rage, she found someone who "wanted to reclaim joy in life." To do that, she realized she had to "trust the darkness — not by running from darkness but by recognizing there is something there to learn."

Like the fetus which begins its life surrounded by the dark, and the seed planted in the dark soil, good things can be born by emerging into the light. People have to take all their complexities "to mend, transform and restore reality. . . Life is our birthright and we need not justify our existence."

In dealing with the forces which bring her or others pain, Zwecher says "there is no us and them. I am them just as they are me. I must come to terms with the violent actions I perform every day."

Zwecher told of a family which "exploded", leaving everyone feeling lonely and alone. For the first time in 20 years, they began dealing with the causes of the explosion and in doing so, reclaimed their lives. "This did not come from dancing in sun-lit meadows. It came from facing the darkness and the truth."

Bad things happen when violence, greed, racism and power become predominant, and yet, she believes, each of us in our initial "unconditioned self" is "tender and responsive, eager to reach out and touch the world around us. . . I can simply be lovable just for being myself."

"After shock, grief, rage and helplessness, healing is possible," she assured everyone. "I dare you to embrace the darkness. Remember, the darker the night, the easier it is to see the stars."

Unfortunately, the stars weren't out when the march began outside. The half-dozen men who were at the gallery were asked to stay there as only women and children marched. "Women have to be able to go anywhere, anytime without male protection," said organizer Anegreth Gerrard.

The streets were quiet as Dianne Hagerman and Janice Benoit led the marchers in song, a Take Back the Night banner rippling in the wind above them. There were no police cruisers and no hecklers, only a lot of twisted necks as people turned to see what was going on.

Rolan Abraham was looking out the window of his store, Sunny Variety, when a reporter stepped in to change her film. He nodded his head in agreement as he listened to why the march was being held. Then he pointed to a poster hanging up near the cash register advertising karate lessons.

"Every man and women should protect themselves and family," the poster read. "The best way is to learn self-defense." And Abraham, a Karate instructor, feels his lessons will help.

"The last time I was in a candle-lit march was the Terry Fox Prayer Vigil in Toronto," said Diane Dron, who walked with her daughter Liane, marvelling that the rain couldn't extinguish the flame of their peach-scented candles. Coincidentally, the 10th annual Terry Fox run was held the next day.

Asked why she decided to take part, Mrs. Dron said "I'm for peace. I think Christians should support those who are hurting and this is the way I could do it."

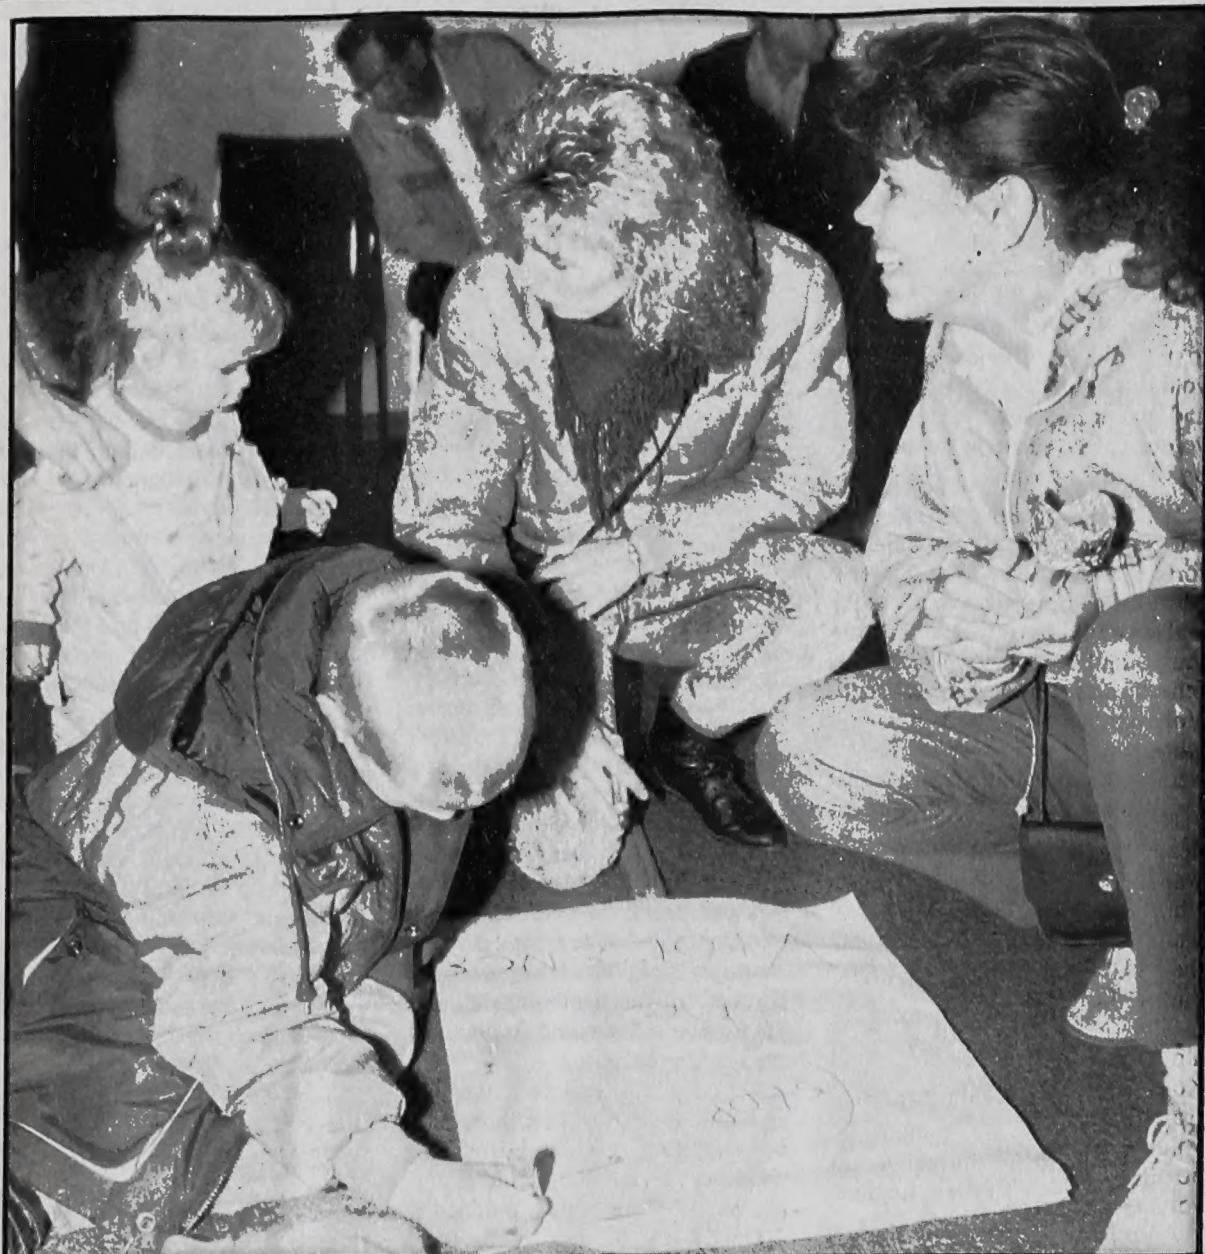

"I liked the singing and walking and smell of the candles," said seven-year-old Liane of why she enjoyed taking part. In the car on the way to the march, Liane told her mother "she felt sorry for the people who have bad things happen to them."

The four women from the Peterborough Rape Crisis Centre were impressed by the number of people who did take part, especially since this is the first time the march was held in the county.

"It empowers women," Cindy St. Pierre of Haliburton's Women's Safety Network said as her young daughter nibbled on a cookie. "It's a way of just being able to walk at night together and feel safe."

Does she feel threatened if she walks alone? "It's that fear of always looking over your shoulder and not knowing who's there."

For the 50 people who walked Minden's main street on Saturday night, a look over their shoulder to all the smiling, happy faces put a little extra bounce in their step. For them, walking at night hasn't felt so good in a long time.

ON YOUR MARCH: This youngster gets ready for the Take Back the Night march by making a poster at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery on Saturday night. The march, the first of its kind in the county, was a resounding success as approximately fifty women paraded down Main Street in Minden. Its purpose is to increase awareness about violence against women and children, and to encourage people to change their attitudes.

Shoreline being ruined

ly not pleased with council's decision. "We would like it left as it is."

"What's there now is tragic as far as the shoreline is concerned," Mrs. Rintoul said of present development. "It's dreadful anyone can do that to such a natural riverbank...People will level off everything — which is not what we come to Haliburton to see."

If the Rintouls have concerns about specific properties and how they've been developed, the municipality can give them lot and concession numbers. The Rintouls could then check with the MNR that its recommendations and conditions are being carried out properly.

"You'd have more authority, you can get better response," Mr. Rintoul said. Council did not respond whether it would take their concerns to the MNR.

Seniors face unique problems

discussed the success of Palliative Care Victoria in Victoria County.

There is no Haliburton equivalent to the service provided by these volunteers. When a person is dying, and active treatment is stopped, a volunteer helps them to die at home, or with the transition to hospital.

"It's not everyone who can work with the terminally ill and feel comfortable with it," says Mrs. Konyer. Most volunteers, who come from all walks of life, have had someone in their family die and want to help others during this time of need. Volunteers are of particular help when families cannot be with the patient 24-hours a day.

Most patients are less afraid of death than they are of dying. They want reassurance that it won't "hurt", and want to know what will happen. Much time is also spent with the family who also need support during this time.

"There's a great fear of being alone that last moment," Mrs. Konyer noted. If a patient must be transferred to hospital, the volunteering doesn't stop and most hospital staff is glad of the volunteer's presence.

An offshoot of Palliative Care is a new bereavement support group. "People feel very open to share how they're feeling and hurting," says Mrs. Konyer.

Dr. William Arnup, a vice-chairman of the council, asked if any of the patients ask about euthanasia. When Mrs. Konyer said no, he said he wasn't surprised.

In another presentation that afternoon, Donna Pacey talked about Haliburton County Home Support Services. It helps seniors and disabled persons remain independent for as long as possible and provides social outlets.

Many clients are elderly women who have no pension plans and need any assistance they can get, Pacey said. To ensure continuation of services, she added, there has to be enough staff, increased numbers of volunteers and increased funding.

"Very few seniors apply to our department," Morris Honeyman, director of the Haliburton County Department of Social Services, said. "Maybe they're too proud."

When seniors can no longer live at home, there is often a waiting list at the two residential/nursing facilities, Hyland Crest and Extension. If more beds are added at Hyland Crest, the county must come up with 20 per cent of the operating costs.

"As social workers, we're trying to figure out what we can do with these people," Honeyman said, also praising the many home care services available to fill the gap.

Other problems include the lack of specialists in the county, necessitating long drives for people for whom transportation is already difficult. "I think it's a shame they have to go outside the county."

Honeyman suggested that Haliburton County be designated Rural Remote to improve its funding opportunities. Right now there is only rural or remote, and neither signify our unique problems.

After Valmay Barkey's presentation on Victoria County Community Care, council member Bill Hughes of Toronto noted "We're caught in an abyss of leadership" on funding. Cliff Ward, also of Toronto, added "we go through these in-depth studies and it all gets sidetracked. They just don't know what to do."

When organizations have to spend time doing studies to prove needs, time is being taken away from providing services. Then the study is ignored, Ward said, angry at such responses.

LET'S ROLL: Bicycles seemed to be the most popular mode of transportation for the younger participants in the 10th Annual Terry Fox Run, which is in honour of the brave Canadian who raised money for cancer research. The fastest cycling finish for the 8.6 kilometre course was claimed by Tim Stouffer of Haliburton.

Opinions differ over closure fee

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

There was a slight difference of opinion — by the amount of $4,500 — about how much Stanhope should charge for a road closure on Constance Island.

Gary Marquis and two partners want to create five new lots on the Kushog Lake island, which they bought a couple of years ago. To give them the required frontage they must first buy an unopened road allowance. The new lots would be for family, Marquis told council.

On Wednesday, council suggested that the closure price should be $5,000, based on increased property values if the severances go through.

"Five lots are worth more than the island as a whole," clerk-administrator Gerald Bain said.

There are two or three different angles for looking at that, Marquis replied. "People who buy recreational property, only five per cent would consider islands because of transportation problems."

Of the $5,000 figure, he said "it seems a little high — quite a little

Legion for the luncheon. "There's something going on," Mrs. Shipley said. "What is all my family doing here?"

Despite being deeply touched by the Legion's recognition and all the kind words said about her, Mrs. Shipley doesn't enjoy being in the limelight. "To make a wheel run smoothly there has to be many spokes and I'm just one of them. I don't like being the thing in the middle, making it all turn."

Then she says something which speaks of why the community did want her to know its appreciation of her efforts. "Church or Legion, that's where you can usually find me."

And rest assured, she'll not be there doing nothing.

IT'S BETTER THAN IT LOOKS: Even though the outside looks a little rough, the Minden arena's ice will be put in the next week or so in preparation for another skating season. Right now, the outer walls are being repaired and improvements and additions are planned. Anyone interested in helping by sitting on a committee is asked to phone the municipal office. Money will have to be raised to pay for some of the changes.

Few people will disagree with Dysart council's decision to send Ride for Sight organizers looking elsewhere for a place to hold their annual event. A weekend of drinking and partying may be some people's idea of a good time, but it's hardly the sort of activity that should be encouraged, particularly on the scale that has taken place at previous Rides for Sight.

Organizers of the event have always tried to convince potential hosts that the people who participate are responsible middle and even upper income people who just want to take a pleasant highway cruise on their Goldwings or BMWs and raise some money for a good cause while they're at it. And of course, all these good citizens can hardly wait to pour endless tens of thousands of dollars into the host community's economy, the organizers say. Figures as absurdly inflated as a million dollars were being bandied about in the Dysart presentation. The truth, as Minden found out, is quite different. Upscale riders participate, but most of them turn around and head off somewhere else as soon as they reach their destination. The riders who stay around the party are generally a rougher crowd, and their behaviour is seldom exemplary. If it were, Minden OPP would not have expressed dismay at the prospect of the Ride's return to the county. If it were, the Ride would not be looking for yet another home, after leaving Minden, and after last year's ride, by Trent University.

While council's decision was certainly the right one, the fact that the Ride For Sight delegation was not listed on council's published agenda is disturbing. The public should have been informed that some councillors thought Haliburton should host the ride. That would have given taxpayers an opportunity to register their displeasure with the prospect. The matter was poorly handled, even if wisdom and common sense did, in the end, prevail.

A good example

The spirit of volunteerism is under assault these days, threatened by the powerful forces of social change that have created a generation of people who think far more of themselves than they do of others. Yet it is gratifying to know that volunteerism continues to thrive in the minds and hearts of a few local citizens who go quietly about the business of making the community a better place, not for recognition but for the satisfaction of giving.

And of these exemplary citizens, none is more worthy of praise than the person who was honoured on Sunday with the highest service medal awarded by the Royal Canadian Legion. For decades, Jan Shipley has quietly but competently performed a long list of voluntary responsibilities, from heading up the Legion Ladies Auxiliary to playing the organ at her church, from working on Red Cross blood donor clinics to serving as an executive of the community housing committee that secured a new senior citizens apartment complex for Haliburton village. Indeed the list of her volunteer efforts on behalf of the community is so extensive, and the results of her work so significant, that it is hard to imagine they could all be accomplished by one person.

In an era when people's gaze is turning increasingly inward and away from shared responsibility, time has become a currency to be hoarded and spent mainly on ourselves. That, perhaps, is why people such as Jan Shipley are so necessary, and so extraordinary. Many people can afford to be generous with their money when a cause is worthy. Few people, though, are prepared to give the even more valuable gift of time. And fewer still are willing to give that gift day after day, year after year, not for glory — for there is seldom any to be had — but because they believe sharing their time and talents for the benefit of others is honourable and just and necessary.

There are very few Jan Shipleys left in Canada's communities. Haliburton should count itself lucky that she, and a few others like her, are living quietly and generously among us.

A sympathetic ear on Ride

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

I would like to sympathize with the people who are against the Ride for Sight weekend because of the noise and damage, although it is only one weekend and it's for a good cause.

Brian Watts seems to be the only one in favour of the ride. I don't think Mr. Watts has any idea of the noise levels, especially at night. He says that he has roughly 1000 people at his park "and most of them go to bed at midnight." I have a cottage that backs onto the camping area of (Mr. Watts') Rips Sleepy Hollow and have to put up with the noise and garbage from his camp almost every weekend during the summer. One weekend the loud music on Saturday night continued till 4:00 a.m. Sunday morning. When I approached Mr. Watts to discuss the problem, he was "visibly angry." He informed me, there was no noise or problem (as if to say "don't shove me no crap"). He said to me "if you don't like it (the noise) you can sell your cottage." I had company that evening and night and it was most distressing. After most weekends, I can go to the back of my property and pick up beer bottles and cans; all manner of garbage; and visual remains that my property has been used as an outdoor toilet. I felt that since he was on town council, I could go to him with my problems. I am not the only one who borders the park and has the same problem. I have even heard of people with children staying at the camp who have refused to go back.

For Mr. Watts to say there would be no problems at Glebe Park is as naive as saying we don't have a problem on Pine Lake every weekend.

Definition problem

To the Editor:

The front page of Section 2 in your September 12, 1990 edition carried in very bold type, the headline "What's Our Problem"? The article that followed offered possible answers by various attendees of the Chamber of Commerce sponsored barbeque.

I do not question the merit or validity of the discussion reported in the Echo but I do think a major reason was perhaps overlooked. I hope the following comments will be viewed as constructive criticism.

Next to the photograph of two attendees it states, "The barbeque gave Chamber members a chance to dress like tacky tourists." Reading the article, I cannot tell if this was the proposed format of the event, or the way The Echo reported it. It's really a moot point since either way it exhibits a gross insensitivity. I assume the purpose of this gathering was to foster increased tourism. Would the Chamber pay the postage to mail a complimentary copy of this page to every guest registered at local establishments this year so they could understand just how they are viewed?

It would appear they are viewed as "cash cows" to be milked and treated with little or no respect in spite of the fact that without them there would be no great need for a Chamber of Commerce.

Perhaps local business people should be a bit introspective and examine just how they feel about and treat their customers. While it's great to "get the Village back" at the end of the season, if Haliburton is to prosper the "tacky tourists" should not be resented but made to feel welcome and wanted.

Services provided

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to a letter which appeared in the September 12th issue of the Echo. The writer was justifiably upset that the counselling services provided by Mr. Jardin have been terminated. I share the writer's dismay that these services will no longer be available locally. However, I must point out that there are other services, available locally, which address many of the problematic issues mentioned in the letter, and that it's not always necessary to travel outside of the County to receive the services. I would recommend to the writer and to others needing such services to consult the "Haliburton County Information Directory" which is available at the Haliburton County Information Centre.

FEIR PLAY

CREIGHTON FEIR

LOCAL HOCKEY FANS will be sorry to hear that they will only have one opportunity to see Bernie Nicholls play this coming year at Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto. According to the 1990-91 National Hockey League Schedule, the New York Rangers will only be making one appearance in Toronto and that will be on March 2nd, 1991.

Jean Morgan will be the guest speaker at a ladies meeting (planning to affiliate with Woman Aglow) at the J.D. Hodgson Senior Elementary School in Haliburton on Monday September 24th 7:30 p.m. in the Library.

According to an article in the North Kawartha Times, Coboconk OPP are seeking the owner of a collie dog which was shot on September 8 near the village. At approximately 11:10 p.m. OPP officers responded to a report of a single shot being fired. The report lead them to a collie dog that had been wounded by a shotgun. According to the police report, the person responsible for shooting the dog has been located and identified. At the time of the shooting, the dog was believed to be a wolf. The owner of the dog has not been located and should contact Coboconk OPP. The dog is described as being a female, about three years old and all blonde in colour. The dog was taken to the Gull River Veterinary Clinic where it later died.

Sixty-five people were in attendance at the 1990 Elstone Family Reunion held at Birch Point Lodge on Saturday. Family members came from Lindsay, Haliburton, Burlington, Scarborough, Mississauga, Nipissing, Ottawa, Key Largo, U.S.A., Toronto and from many other centres in Ontario. Following a potluck lunch in the recreation hall some indoor games were played while races were underway out on the lawn. After an afternoon of visiting and the renewing of old acquaintances everyone sat down to a delicious turkey dinner.

A few short notes . . . The ice is in at the arena in Haliburton and the figure skaters as well as the hockey teams are starting to practice for the upcoming season . . . The H.H.S.S. Redmen football team will have their home opener this coming Friday, September 21 when they meet I.E. Weldon in their home opener on the Haliburton gridiron . . . The Haliburton Men's Hockey League will swing into action this coming Sunday, September 23 at the arena in Haliburton . . . CNIB canvas in Haliburton County is now underway.

It has been brought to my attention on several occasions the fact that the stop and go signals at the traffic lights at the main intersection in Haliburton are not changing quickly enough. It would appear at times that it seems like an eternity waiting for the Red hand that tells pedestrians not to walk, to the time that the white man appears to let you know that it's finally time to walk across the street. The new traffic lights are certainly an added addition to this corner but let's hope that the above mentioned problem is solved in the very near future.

Our prayers have finally been answered and a new government dock is being constructed to replace the old one on Head Lake. Work crews have been working hard for the past week or two replacing and enlarging the present facilities. We understand that the next step is to put in a brand new launching ramp, something that has been needed for some time now. We have heard some complaints that a few boaters are abusing the privilege of docking their boats here. A few people are tying their boats to the dock and letting them stay here overnight while others may leave them tied up here for several days. This makes it bad for the boaters who want to come into town and shop by boat, only to find that all spaces are being used at the dock. Let's use a little common sense in this regard.

The annual meeting of the Haliburton BIA and Election of Officers will be held to-night (Wednesday, September 19) at 8:00 p.m. at the Legion Hall in Haliburton. The BIA urges all members to attend reminding them that "It's your organization—be involved."

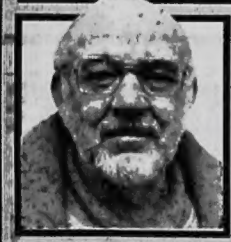

Members of the Brodhagen family all met in Powassan, Ontario recently for a family re-union. Joan and Michael Brodhagen came all the way from Calgary, Alberta to attend, and later visited with friends and relatives in Haliburton.

Here, there and everywhere . . . Happy Birthday to Diane Bird of Haliburton who celebrated her birthday on September 12 . . . Doris and George Wheeler of Springfield, Mass., visited with friends and relatives in Haliburton last week . . . A belated happy birthday wish to Bill Burden of West Guilford . . . Many local baseball fans have been in Toronto recently to cheer on the Toronto Blue Jays at the Dome . . . There's still another chance to register to play hockey in the Wilberforce Minor Hockey Association. It's Sunday, September 30 from 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m.

POINTS OF VIEW

Song must stay in the heart

AS OTHERS SEE IT

BOB GIULIANO

SOMETIMES I WISH I could sing. I wish I could come up with a lovely song that allowed my heart to say what it longs to say.

I think the first time I recognized this longing to sing was when I was conducting a particularly sad funeral. I had the words of faith to read and a little sermon to preach, but it all seemed like just a bunch of words. I wanted to sing a gentle song that would sort of put its arms around the folks, maybe get them to sing softly along with it.

Since then there have been many times that I've wanted to sing my song for certain folks. Maybe we all have a song longing to be sung. Maybe singers and song writers do their best to give us theirs to sing. It doesn't quite do it, but it helps.

I really envy folks who can and do sing for others when we can't sing for ourselves, especially those who invite everyone into their song.

Sometimes when I'm visiting people who are really sick I think I'd just like to sit by them and hum a tune or two. Once I did it. I was visiting a lady who had been unconscious for many weeks. "a vegetable", they called her. I got tired of trying to talk to her, so I took her hand and told her to hold on, I was going to sing. I sang softly all the old hymns I knew. A nurse came in to see what was going on. After awhile she left the patient and me alone. The patient never let on she heard me, but I kept doing that for many months until she died.

A preacher from Toronto, Cliff Elliot, once came to preach for a bunch of discouraged prison chaplains. He sang a lovely song for us right in the middle of his sermon. It revived my desire to sing for folks too, so some months later I tried a tune for my congregation. I started flat, my voice broke in the middle and the choir laughed kindly. I didn't try it again, but have often wanted to.

I'd like to put a song around an angry teenage girl that would help her forgive and fill her with hope. I'd like to sing a tune for a worried mom who is confused yet full of love for her kid. I'd like a song to lift out of my heart for those who are lonely and alone in this world that appears so filled with couples and friendships.

I'd love to sing happy, knee-slapping ditties for little kids and old men and I'd like to surface a melody that would wail for those who drag themselves to tedious, smothering jobs day in and day out.

I'd like a song for nursing homes and their staff that would encourage and give strength. I wonder what songs surgeons sing? Maybe a little hummer for the O.R. would be nice.

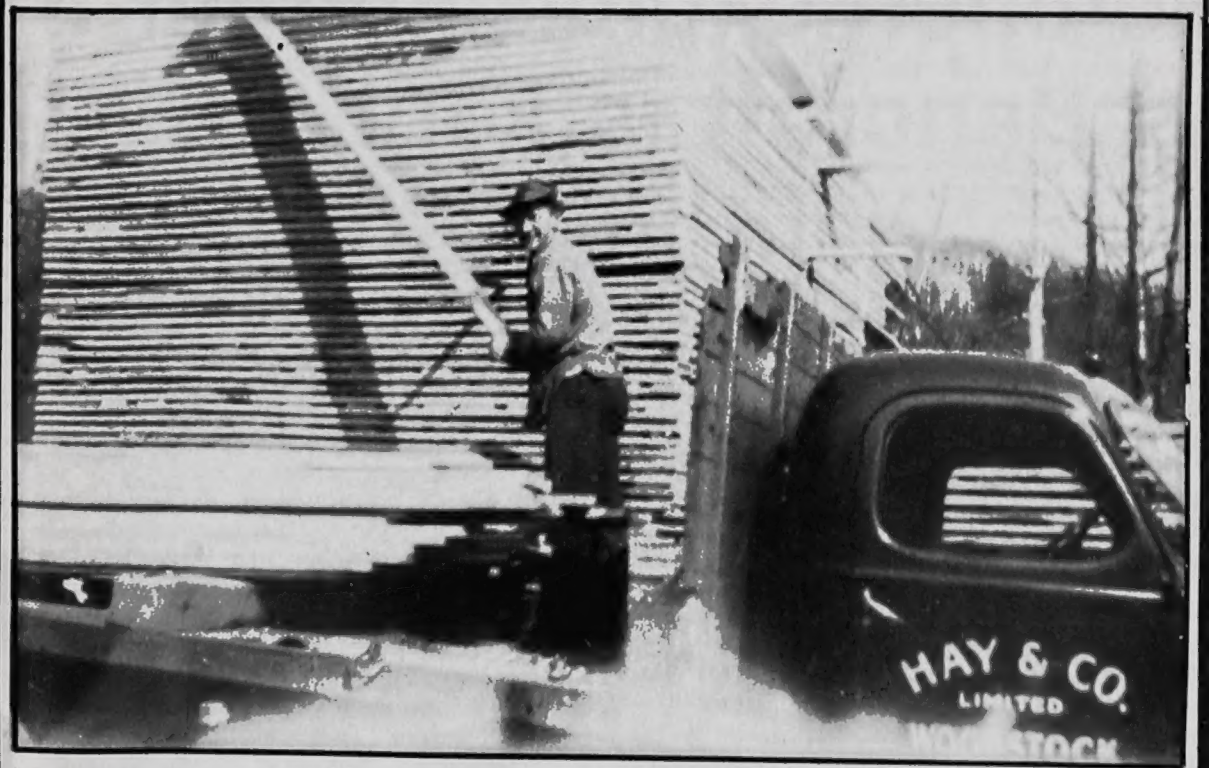

On and on the list goes, but most often this desire to sing a song for folks just comes up in the moment when the heart is full of something that words alone won't say. But the song never comes. The one who gives sings to folks didn't give me any, at least not when I need them the most.

I'm not totally without songs though, I have often discovered that when I am deeply troubled about something and either can't sleep or toss and turn with painful dreams, there is a song. It is sort of down deep in my sub-conscious. While my mind struggles, it is as though my spirit is singing a song of reassurance or comfort, or hope. Maybe the singer inside isn't my spirit, but another's.

It's a funny thing to wake up still humming a song that was a gift in the dark night, one which kind of got you through.

Lately I've been longing to sing a song for Church people and especially for their leaders and ministers. It's got a blues rhythm, but its melody is reassuring, comforting, encouraging. It hums away inside me but won't burst out. If it did we might sigh and laugh a little at ourselves.

Well, don't know why I'm telling you all this except that sometimes I wish this column could become a song that could touch your spirit and heart and simply remind you that everything is going to be O.K. and encourage you to sing your song whenever and to whom ever you can. The world needs a new song.

Pic of the Past

and the Bank of Commerce had a split of physical assets and surrendered the Charter of the Canadian Land and Immigration Company. The last of their limits in the townships of Guilford, Eyre, Havelock and Harburn were purchased by the Canadian branch of the United States Plywood Company, Hay and Company of Woodstock, who later sold out to Weldwood of Canada. Several men from West Guilford, Eagle Lake and Haliburton were employed by Hay and Company.

Some clowns are really Bozos

CLARKE

LAST WEEK, when I took my column commenting on the election into The Echo, I got into a discussion about politicians. Someone referred to one of them as 'a bozo,' which I found rather amusing, since this was the topic of this week's column...

Because, in the old days you referred to some one who acted dumb as 'a clown,' and you do hear a lot of people use 'bozo' instead these days. In a way, it's quite a tribute, like calling any tissue a Kleenex, or any photo copier a Xerox.

So when I saw a recent story about 'Bozo the Clown,' I dug out a few 'bozo' news stories from my files — like this one from August:

A Port Hope man complained to police that a car drove into his garage door (which was closed) shortly after midnight, backed up and drove into it a second time. There was apparently extensive damage to the door and minor damage to the car — which was driven by his wife! She was charged with impaired driving...

But when I thought about it, I realized that clowns are a story in themselves. And in fact, it would seem that real clowns are a dying breed. In fact, today's Bozo has a booming business — if he could only keep finding the people he needs.

(Interestingly enough, there are going to be a lot of political 'clowns' out of work now, and this particular column was sparked by the story about Bozo's need for more real ones).

Back in the early 50s, when I was advertising manager for Capitol Records of Canada, one of our regular moneyspinners we counted on to pay the rent was a series of kiddie discs on 78 rpm featuring Pinto Colvig, then known as 'Bozo the Capitol Clown.'

Pinto got involved in a dustup with the record company in California when they hired another clown to play Bozo in a movie they were making — and discovered that he had sold the rights to his makeup when he signed the contract with Capitol.

You wouldn't know it, what with everyone and his brother painting his face — and yours if you'll let him — at shopping malls and birthday parties, but the clothes and the makeup are designed by each clown for himself, and are his trade mark.

The Bozo movie, now starring one Larry Harmon, never got released up to 1954 when I left the firm, and according to the recent story, actually never did.

Apparently, Harmon bought the Bozo rights from the record people, and dropped their name out of the clown's monicker. He then did the Kentucky Fried Chicken bit — he franchised the name, the outfit, the whole schtick. So far, he says he's trained 203 other Bozos.

There are six featured on TV stations in the U.S., and currently 15 other stations who want to do the same kind of show. There are another dozen or so in other countries, including one in Brazil who does a six hour show that's aired six days a week!

And while the movie never made it, a series of cartoon Bozo shows, running in conjunction with a live Bozo host — or on their own — are being viewed every day all over the world.

While circuses used to hire clowns, this Bozo has created his own traveling Bozo Circus. The power of television, which has helped virtually wipe out the real circus, makes it possible for him to run his own.

All this has led to what Harmon calls 'The Bozo Crunch.' He says he really needs a lot of Bozos, and a good Bozo is apparently hard to find. He says the people he trains must be able to amuse children, while at the same time entertaining the adults who watch or accompany them to live shows. And he has to be able to reassure the occasional frightened toddler, unfamiliar with the concept.

"I'm not looking for clowns, Harmon. 'I need a person with a sense of warmth, a sense of understanding. If he's an entertainer, fine, but he doesn't have to be. I'm looking for people persons.'"

I have a Hollywood address available c/o The Echo, for anyone — politician or not — who thinks he meets Larry Harmon's criteria that he's be a warm, understanding person. They would like you to send along a resume and a video tape.

Frankly, I think the main problem is that he might have a bit of trouble getting you an immigration card to work over there.

They should be having state elections soon, and that should turn loose a pretty good supply of their own 'clowns,' who are already citizens...

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON
LYNCH

SHE HANDED HIM the old photograph. "There he is, bottom row, on the left," she said, pointing to a smallish man with a hat and suspenders. His features were hard to make out due both to the age of the picture and the camera technology of the day. "Hard to imagine he was ever that young," she continued. "I always knew him as a very old man."

The photograph was taken at a logging mill long since gone from the shores of the lake. However the terrain had remained much the same over the years and it wasn't hard to recognize the scene where the men in the photo had stood. Only now cottages lined the shore and trees had been planted.

The two of them were sitting out on her deck. They had been talking of what it was like when they were growing up, how they had spent their summers on the lake. When she had brought out the old photo and started talking about her grandfather, he was surprised. He'd imagined this sophisticated professional woman who had spent her teenage years perfecting her water skiing and breaking hearts at the weekly dances, all the while had had a grandfather who used to work in the lumber camps and mill.

How distant he must have felt from her and she from him during those years. Distant in that their lives were so different. When he came to visit, he'd sit out in a chair by the lake, right over there under that pine. He'd gaze out over the water while she twirled behind a boat, skimming the same waves on which he'd ridden the log booms.

"He'd sit there all day," she told her friend. "He really loved the lake." When she and her sister came and sat down beside him, he'd tell them stories of this logging days in long rambling recitations that often taxed their attention. Sometimes he'd forget what he had been recounting as another memory came crowding back and suddenly the conversation would drift off in another direction entirely.

"You know how kids are," she said. "Impatient with old people. His stories were pretty good but he'd go on and on. One thing that always annoyed me was the way he kept referring to 'Crooked Lake'. He'd point out to this or that spot across the bay and talk about the time such and such happened out there on 'Crooked Lake'. We kept telling him that was somewhere else, that this was Haliburton Lake but he didn't seem to hear us.

"We figured he made up a lot of those stories. Either that or got his memories mixed up with other things, other places. He was very old. But we listened. Sometimes when he was talking I think he forgot we were even there, he'd get so wrapped up in what he was remembering.

"I got really fed up with this 'Crooked Lake' business one afternoon after he had told us some wild and crazy story and I went into the cottage and asked mom why he was always going on about 'Crooked Lake' when everyone knew that wasn't our lake at all. Mom, who had been born when grandpa was already well on in years, just told me not to worry about it, that he got things mixed up sometimes.

"He didn't usually come with us into town when he came to visit. He preferred to have a nap in the hammock by his favourite pine. But one day he was feeling pretty frisky and asked if he could come along. He hadn't been in for years and years.

"We walked the car and grandpa, sis, mom and I started parking down main street, not too fast. Grandpa was looking all around, just taking his time. He had on the same white shirt, suspenders and hat he always wore when he got dressed up. As we walked by that spot where the bank used to be, there was the bench that had been there as long as I could remember. As usual there were a few old men sitting on it, enjoying the sun, passing the odd word back and forth.

He'd gaze out over the water while she twirled behind a boat, skimming the same waves on which he'd ridden log booms

"As we passed by, I suddenly heard a voice. 'Hey Shorty. Is that you Shorty?' I turned around and here was some old guy standing in front of grandpa, peering into his face. Gramps was doing the same. Then a light went on and he poked out his hand which the other man started pumping like crazy. 'Why I haven't seen you in a coon's age, Shorty. Where have you been keeping yourself all these years?' he asked grandpa who was now grinning ear-to-ear. Gramps mumbled something I didn't quite catch and then he said he had been spending a lot of time up at Crooked Lake.

"That's great Shorty. Glad to see you again," the man responded, 'But it isn't called Crooked Lake any more. They renamed it Haliburton Lake.'

Here she stopped for a minute and smiled. "My sister and I nearly keeled over when we heard that," she continued. "All this while we had thought Grandpa didn't know what he was talking about and he knew all the time. We were the ones who didn't know. I had never heard the old name before, except from him."

"So what did he say when the other fellow corrected him?" her friend asked.

"He didn't say anything. Never even blinked. And in a minute we were on our way. When we got back to the cottage," she remembered, "he was really tired and had a nap. When he got up just before supper he came out of the bedroom with this picture and gave it to me. The man he had seen in town was in it and he wanted me to have it. He said it was taken right beside Crooked Lake. Then he gave one of his grins, just like that afternoon by the bench, and said I knew what lake he meant now."

Fed up with government?

MORE LETTERS

FROM ECHO
READERS...

To the Editor:

The recent provincial election has revealed that a lot of us were fed up with big arrogant governments. Mr. Peterson was the recipient of more than provincial anger. Much pain and suffering has been inflicted on this nation by those to whom we have given power. I am extremely fed up with the attitudes and actions of the federal government with respect to native land claims and their civil rights.

This year, with the deliberate cuts in funding to native and women's organizations, and the absence of discussion of these rights at the Meech Lake pressure cooker, I could sense that this long festering national wound would require attention. What kind of attention is it getting from the Prime Minister? Tom Sid-don gets to do the dirty work like Pierre Cadieux before him with the Lubicons.

All of what is now Canada was "claimed" for the British crown by various explorers many hundreds of years ago "claims" that were never negotiated with the current inhabitants and certainly never approved of by them. But the British courts in Canada of course always accepted such "claims" as legal.

It's rather like having a robber come in your house, point a gun at you, claim the whole thing, and then set up a court to adjudicate whether or not you would be allowed to keep your desk in a corner of the basement. You may or may not understand the legal process imposed on you and you may or may not be offered standing in that court. But if you protest, you are a "trouble maker" and if you fight in self defense, you are a terrorist.

If countries have souls, this is a soul issue not one to be played out with "negotiation by siege". It is time for this federal government and the Prime Minister to put away the push-to-the-brink, hard-ball labour negotiation style. What is required is a

Redmen exhibit fine form as Bancroft is kept off scoreboard in Friday play

The HHSS Redmen got their football season off to an impressive start last Friday as the junior and senior teams had no trouble defeating Bancroft in exhibition matches.

Since this is the first year that Bancroft has fielded a junior team, the exhibition match was run as a controlled scrimmage, with the Bancroft coach on the field to assist his players in reading plays and reacting to them. Even so, the junior Redmen dominated play through 60 minutes. Jerry Cooper, Andy Bacaon and Chris Greenfield each scored touchdowns for the Redmen, who won 18-0.

The juniors are expecting big things this season from an offensive line that averages at least 170 pounds — Derek Wilson at centre, guards Pat Bradley and Todd McCracken, tackles Jamie Keefer and Jeff Black, and tight end Greg Brohman. Corbie Kent also looks strong in his first year as quarterback.

"We should have a really good year" said coach Gary Brohman, who believes his juniors may be good enough to go undefeated all season.

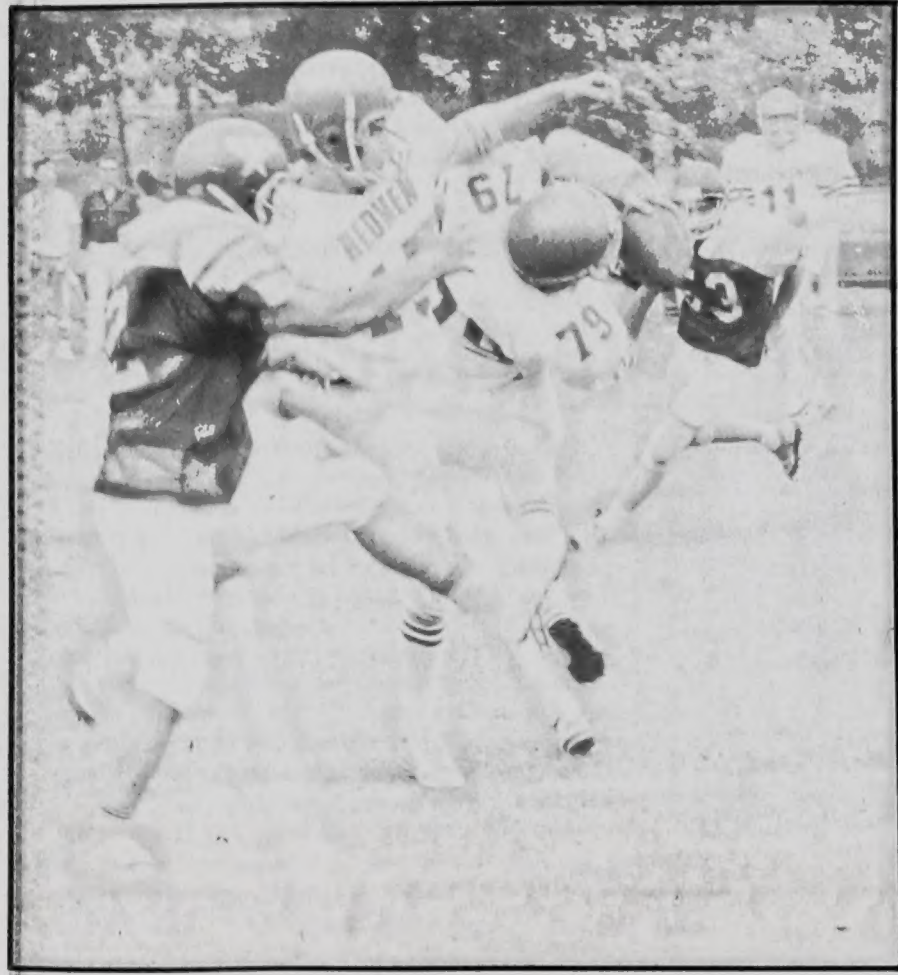

For the seniors, Friday's game proved something less than challenging, as they rolled to a 32-0 win. Darren Danylyshen scored an impressive four touchdowns, with Chris Allaire adding another TD from his fullback position. Brian Waller kicked a single and a convert.

"We're pleased with the total effort of our offense and defense" said coach Brohman of the senior Redmen's showing.

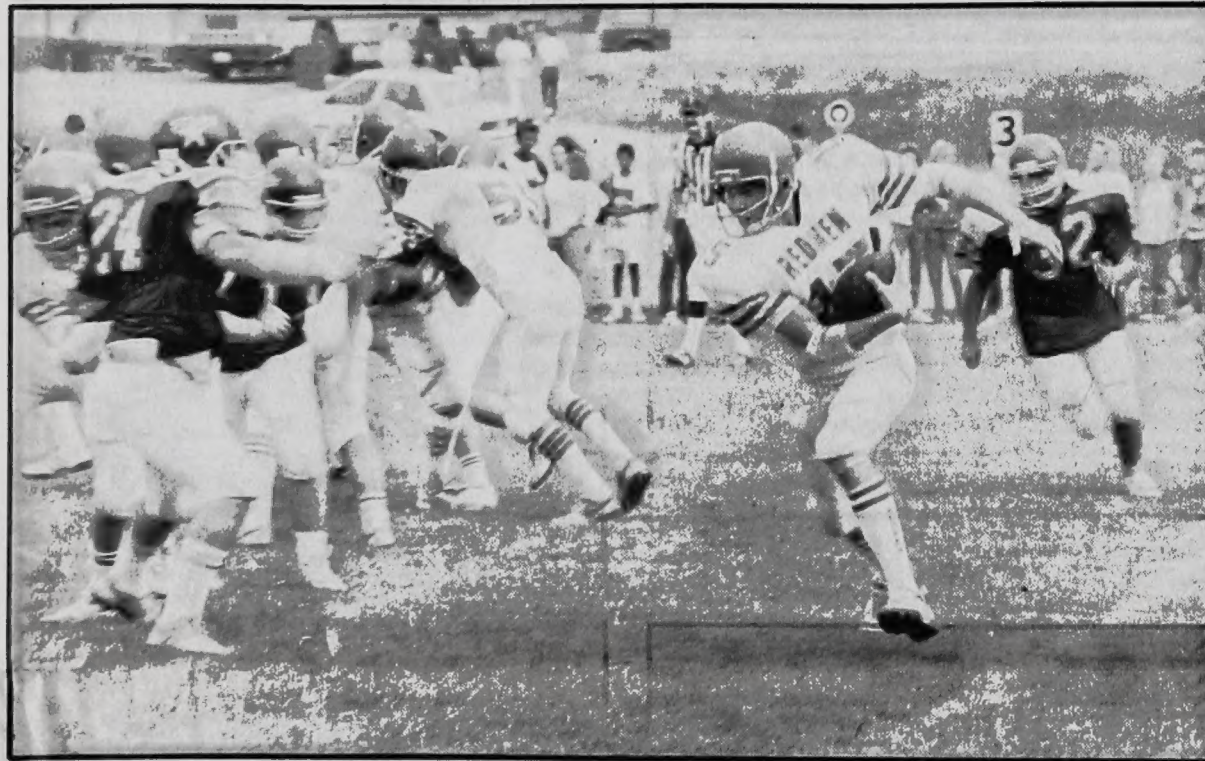

This Friday the teams will get their first big test, as the Redmen host I.E. Weldon for the first games of the regular season. Kickoff time for the senior game is 2 p.m., with the junior game getting underway at about 4 p.m.

Fine line play aided the Redmen attack

Redmen come up short in soccer

Juniors find Fenelon an aggressive foe, Seniors don't score

Despite strong play by the midfield, Haliburton high school's senior Redmen soccer team lost a 3-0 decision to Fenelon Falls in their first game of the season last Wednesday. Fenelon scored twice in the first half and added another in the second to frustrate the hopes of the senior team.

However, coach Walter Tose said he was not overly disappointed with his team's play. Several of the players are new to the squad, and should gain experience as the season progresses.

The team will be looking for a better result this Wednesday when they play host to I.E. Weldon.

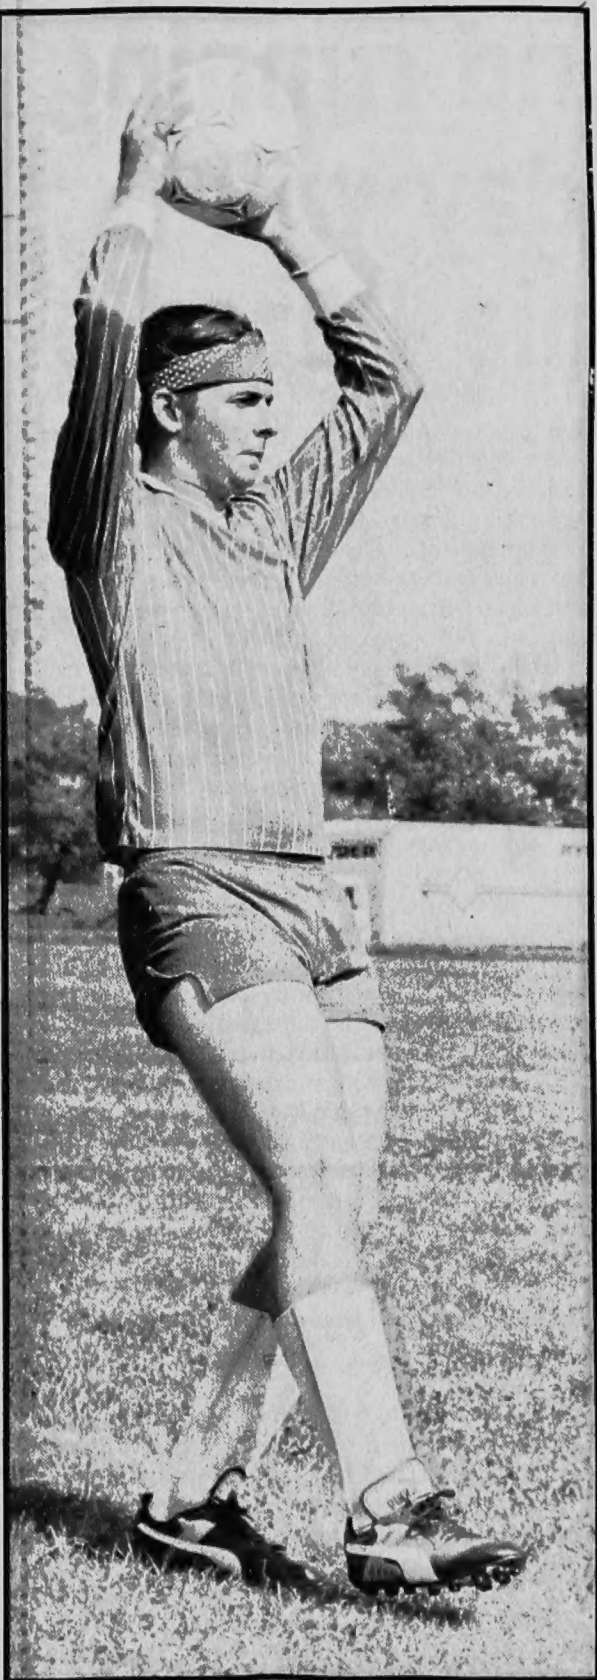

In the junior game, aggressive play by Fenelon gave them a two-goal jump on the Redmen, and the local boys were unable to get on top, despite playmaking that allowed Darren Parsons and Mike Morrison each to score a goal. A well placed corner kick kept Fenelon in the lead, and a breakaway goal in the second half secured the visitors' 4-2 win over the HHSS juniors.

Good efforts were turned in by Redmen Nico Haedicke, Mike Morrison and Darren Parsons.

The Redmen will host I.E. Weldon this Wednesday afternoon. Game time is 2:30 p.m. for seniors, with the junior game to follow.

'I'm lucky to be alive,' says Jamie Paradie

He's not up and running yet, but that day will come for Jamie Paradie

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

JAMIE PARADIE HAS TOO MUCH LIVING to do to let an accident stand in his way. Three months after losing half of his right leg, Jamie is only looking towards the future and what opportunities it will hold.

"Hopefully I'll be able to get on skates again," says the 17-year-old, home in West Guilford for the weekend. "That's my goal. I'll do it, too."

Given how quickly he's learned to walk with his prosthesis, he probably will.

As Jamie walks down the street, his entire attention seems focused on the running shoe and the long metal bar which links it to the plastic thigh Jamie has strapped around his stomach. He's learned how to roll the shoe from heel to toe, and he's so intent he can only walk at one speed — fast.

"I'm only supposed to walk 15 minutes at a time," he says of how he must gradually become familiar with his new leg. Once he progresses a little more, he'll be given a new prosthesis, the "Cadillac" version. "It will have padding on it and shock absorbers."

Jamie has come a long way already since June 8, a distance not only to be measured in time.

This was Jamie's second summer working on the chip spreader for Miller Paving. He had quit school in the winter and signed up with Miller, partly because he liked his job, and partly because he liked his foreman.

"It was fun," he says of work, an opinion which hasn't changed. "It kept you busy all day and the day went fast."

The spreader is hooked onto a truck. Gravel is put into a bin and then as an auger moves round and round, gravel is tossed below onto the oil-covered road.

When the bin is almost empty, it was Jamie's job to walk along a catwalk, past the auger, to tell the driver it was time for a re-fill.

This was something Jamie had done a hundred times before this Friday morning near Newcastle. Yet something quite simple went wrong: "I slipped and fell in."

Slipping is very dangerous when you're atop a moving machine. His right leg got twisted around the auger and was severed. His left boot was loose and slipped off, probably saving his left leg, although doctors would not know that immediately.

If that wasn't horrifying enough, Jamie would have to stay trapped in the spreader for two and a half hours before rescue crews could cut him out. Thankfully, his foreman was there and if it wasn't for him, Jamie doesn't know how he could have stood the pain.

"At first I thought I would be sick," he says, only later admitting he was in pain. "I was just thinking about getting out."

When the helicopter was rushing him to Sunnybrook Hospital in Toronto, attendants asked him if he wanted something for the pain. They told him it would be better if he didn't. By now in shock, Jamie said if he could stay two-and-a-half hours in the spreader without any medication, he could survive the helicopter ride.

Doctors operated immediately but a second operation was needed to determine if Jamie could keep his left leg. Jamie went into this operation not knowing what would happen. It was only when he woke up and saw the staples and the skin graft on his thigh that he knew his leg was saved. Today there's still a large round wound where the flesh was torn away in the accident.

In the weeks that followed, his mother Judy McMurter was there every day, arriving at nine in the morning and not leaving until nine at night.

"Me and my mom have always been close," Jamie says, adding how grateful he is for her support through all this. "She's a good mom."

His best friend Hans Fleugel arrived the day after the holiday and when Jamie is home on weekends, the two are always together.

"I was pretty freaked out," Hans admits. Then,

Trent Severn report

With 54.9 percent of their range remaining, the Haliburton area reservoir lakes were about 1.5 percent lower than the 10-year average for September 10. This was still 6.5 percent higher than in 1989. Dry weather for most of the past four weeks continues to cause a decline faster than average for the time of year.

In general, the Kawartha Lakes and the rest of the canal route have not needed much reservoir water beyond the minimum flows that must be run from the Gull and Burnt Rivers. Seasonal cooling will be reducing their losses to evaporation soon, even if wetter weather is delayed.

Therapy helps Jamie get accustomed to new leg

'I never thought anything like this would happen but it did, and now everyone's over it and it's fine,' says Jamie's best friend, Hans Fluegel, at right like Jamie, he shrugs his shoulders and thinks only of the present. "I never thought anything like this would happen but it did and now everyone's over it and everything's good."

"It was hard but life goes on," is Jamie's way of describing his attitudes. Teenaged boys are not known for detailed descriptions of their feelings.

Although he seems to have accepted the loss of part of his leg with equanimity — and harbours no ill feelings towards his employers — Jamie still recognizes that in the next few months, it will be difficult to adjust.

Weekdays are spent at the Workers' Compensation Board complex at Jane and Wilson. Besides the gym and rehabilitation centres, it also has a hospital-like wing and residences.

"Anything that's wrong, they can fix it," Jamie says (adding that some of the people there don't seem to have much wrong with them.) "It's pretty neat what they can do nowadays."

When Jamie sits down to put on his running shoe, he's as graceful as a cat. He lets himself down without a bump, and stands up in one smooth movement. That took a lot of practice, Jamie admits.

"They have me lifting weights and swimming," he says of part of his therapy. Walking is also something they help him with and they are just as pleased as he is at his success. Youth is on his side.

Perhaps just as important as the therapy Jamie receives is the chance to talk with other people who have lost limbs. One man also lost a leg when he was 17, and went on to become a transport truck driver and avid outdoorsman. There's also a young boy who uses claws as replacements for missing hands and gets along just fine.

Sometimes they talk about phantom limb pain and how to cope with it. Especially when it's mild, Jamie can feel his missing toes tingle. At first it bothered him and he needed pain killers, but it's now a lot better.

The closer Jamie comes to becoming self-sufficient and efficient with his prosthesis, the more he'll have to think about what to do next.

"Right now I'm just worried about my leg and getting back to normal," he says when asked what sort of job he wants to get. Workers' Compensation will pay for his education, but Jamie has not given much thought to what he wants to study. That's something he'll deal with at the time.

To help him along, the people of West Guilford recently held a benefit dance at the community centre, raising close to $2,000. Organized by Wade and Nielson Stamp, it was given a boost by local store owners and residents.

At first Jamie didn't want to go because he'd be the centre of attention, just like he wasn't sure he wanted this article written. But he was glad he did.

"I didn't think everyone would do that for me," he says of how good it made him feel. "I didn't care about the money, I just cared because everyone was there. It was fun."

While Jamie appreciates everyone's thoughtfulness, there's something inside of him which will really be the key to his complete recovery. It's what made him endure the pain of spending two and a half hours trapped in the spreader, and gives him the determination to be out on his skates again.

"I don't give up," he says of his attitude. "I'm lucky to be alive. I like life."

Bus zoning is changed

Two kindergarten students will be able to attend school close to home instead of making a daily two-hour trek, thanks to a recent change in school zoning.

Stuart Baker, Director of Education, says the decision was based on a two-month review. "We are really working to assure that there are enough students in Gooderham to make (the school's operation) viable," Baker says. He added the study determined the change would be cost efficient, and would help with the overcrowding in Minden's Archie Stouffer Public School.

Baker says this will directly affect only two kindergarten students who will be attending the Gooderham school instead of going to Minden, as previous zoning required. No students who attended one school last year will be switched to the other one this year, he says. The situation of these two students was a factor in the decision, Baker says.

"Really, the board's overall philosophy is to have shorter bus rides for all the students," he says, adding this is not always possible due to cost restraints.

Joyce Cairns of Irondale is very happy about the decision. It means her five-year-old daughter Nikkie will be able to attend the Gooderham school instead of making a two-hour-a-day bus trip back and forth to Minden. The Gooderham school is only eight miles from the Cairns' home; the new boundary is at the end of their property.

"It makes it a lot easier for us," Mrs. Cairns says. "I'm really happy about the decision."

Mrs. Cairns had been concerned the extended travelling time would be too wearing for her daughter, who would have to get up at 6 a.m. "I want the best education for her, and I think Haliburton County offers this," she says. "But I want her to be able to grasp it."

Baker says the board re-assesses bus runs every year to determine changing needs and costs. Since things change rapidly, he cannot predict where boundaries will be in the future, and whether future Irondale-area students will attend Gooderham or Minden schools.

WHY ARE THEY DYING? White birch trees like these are suffering the effects of three years of relative drought conditions throughout the Parry Sound and Muskoka districts. The dry weather has also caused severe stress for hemlock and balsam trees.

too high. I thought it would be a $500 touch but it seems there's another zero in there...Have you got any White Out?"

After admitting that "you kind of got us where you want us," Marquis suggested a 50 per cent reduction in the fee. "And then maybe we can get on with the show and you can get your tax dollars."

Council said it was open to negotiations and asked Marquis to come back with a precise figure.

Adverse weather conditions blamed for dieback of trees

by LEN PIZZEY

Publisher

Low lake levels aren't the only problem associated with dry conditions that have dominated weather patterns in central Ontario over the past three years. Throughout cottage country, Hemlock, White Birch and Balsam Fir trees are dying in substantial numbers. In some instances, whole shorelines are being affected by the death of these species, particularly hemlocks.

"We're seeing it all over the place, from Parry Sound to Pembroke," says Ministry of Natural Resources forestry technician Gary Clements. "We've had a fair number of phone calls" from concerned property owners all over the district.

While rainfall this year has been close to normal, drought conditions in previous years have had a cumulative effect on the health of the three shallow rooted species that predominate — along with white pines — on rocky shorelines throughout cottage country. Starved for moisture, the roots dry out, limiting nourishment to the tree. The resulting stress weakens the tree and it eventually succumbs to fungus and disease.

"You don't always see the result (of prolonged dry conditions) for five years", says Clement. "I expect we're going to see more trees dying in the next two years."

Older, 'overmature' trees are the first to be affected by environmental stress, but younger trees with limited root systems can also succumb. And lack of adequate moisture is not the only problem threatening trees in cottage country. Acid rain, acid deposition and air pollution are also taking their toll, although Clements points out that there is no conclusive evidence linking acid rain with tree decline.

Ironically, trees under stress frequently hasten their own decline by producing a bumper crop of seeds. This phenomenon helps preserve the species, but uses up large amounts of energy, further weakening trees already struggling to survive.

While there is little anyone can do to prevent the death of the Hemlock, White Birch and Balsam Fir trees stressed by drought conditions and other environmental factors, Clement says it's a good idea to replace dead trees with seedling trees as quickly as possible. The MNR does not make trees available for properties smaller than five acres, but there are many private nurseries where seedlings can be purchased at prices similar to those charged by the MNR, Clements says.

sensitive and painful reconciliation with a people who have been extremely patient as they are pushed to the wall.

In my most paranoid moments, I think the Prime Minister wants to push so hard that he can justify bringing on the War Measures Act to put down what he and his media "doctors" will call terrorism.

If this issue and the happenings at Kanestaka and Kahnawake affect you, I implore you to speak out. You can write to: Prime Minister Brian Mulroney; Tom Siddon Minister of Indian Affairs; Audrey McLaughlin, NDP leader; Jean Chretien, Liberal leader; Bill Scott MP for Haliburton; all at the House of Commons, Ottawa, K1A 0A6 (no postage required). Our you can phone the Prime Minister's office 613-992-4211, fax: 613-957-5632; Tom Siddon, 613-995-4988, fax: 613-995-1686; Audrey McLaughlin, 613-992-3602, fax: 613-996-9584;

This nation is led by a man who may be smart but he is not wise. This is a time for wisdom and heart and I pray for a miracle. I have come to understand what Albert Camus meant when he wrote "I love my country too much to be a nationalist".

It's the students and teachers who make a school what it is. At right are Edna and Harold Morgan, principal from 1946 to 1970. Above are Truman Wright and his classmates of 1938 at the 'old', white frame school. They are, from left: Front row: Bud Kernohan, Oswald Snell, Ron Richardson, Keith Fountain, Walter Loucks, Hal McKelvey, Rand Harrison, Doug Fountain and Gordon Fleming. Second row: Bessie Trumball, Marjorie McKelvey, Mary Wallace, Margaret Taylor, Nila Kernohan, Lois Moore, June Wright, Gwenyth Lindop, Lenore Trumball, Marjorie Pritchard and Jimmie Dawson. Third row: Wallace Trumball, Grant Hewitt, Ronald Welch, Betty Rivers, Noreen Stevens, Ruth Moor, Truman Wright, Duncan Fleming, Junior Windover, Sammy Rivers, Bud Stevens and Alec Moore. Fifty years of learning...

by MARTHA PERKINS

STONES AND MORTAR make a building, but it takes teachers and students to transform it into a school. And at Archie Stouffer Elementary School in Minden, 50 years of this winning combination is being celebrated Saturday.

"What makes it special? In a small town it's probably the only institution that touches the entire community," says Bonnie-Lee Berry, a teacher who is helping to organize the 50th anniversary fete. People have different churches, different service clubs, different hobbies, but every child has to one day pass through the doors of the large stone and brick building on the Bobcaygeon Road.

As she walks down the halls noting the various plaques and points of interest — the area between two sets of door where unruly students were places was called "the cage" — it is with pride and much fondness Mrs. Berry recounts her years here. An attachment that began when she was a student here has only grown stronger as continues teaching.

When Mrs. Berry talks of the "new school", she means the most westerly portion of the building. It was built in 1961 for the senior grades, added to in 1966 and was linked to the "old school" by classrooms in 1970.

But when Truman Wright was a student, that old school seemed pretty spanking new to him — it even had flush toilets!!

"Lawrence Pritchard was on the school board and he took us to the boys washroom and showed us how the toilets worked," Mr. Wright remembers of a January morning 49 years ago. The real marvel was the way the two urinals flushed automatically. "I can mind a-waiting for them to flush, thinking that was just something that they did it on their own."

Mr. Wright was 14 then, and he and his peers were the first to be taught in the main stone school complete with all the modern facilities.

For this Minden resident, the "old school" was a wooden frame school which sat close to where the parking lot is today. In 1940, the children were mesmerized by the activities in the yard as the new school was being built. That Christmas, they would clean out their desks, to begin learning in the New Year of 1941 in that formidable stone building. (The hill must seem a mountain to a seven year old.)

"I mind a boy who lived up the street from us who called in and took me to school on my first day — Roy Windover," Mr. Truman remembers as he looks through his old class photographs, able to name every one of the smiling students who attended what was then called the Minden Public and Continuation School. "At those times, you knew everyone who went to school."

School started for him after Easter, in what was known as A class, the forerunner of Kindergarten. "They'd let us play with plasticine and draw pictures and help us recognize a few words, like dog and cat. Recess was at 10:30 and we could go home

Archie Stouffer Elementary School celebrates half-century of dedication

The old school was torn down in 1941; timber used on other buildings then and come back at 1 o'clock and go home again at 2:30."

There weren't grades then, and the progression went as follows: Junior 1, Senior 1, Junior 2, Senior 2, . . . Grade 8, when you tried your entrance exam, was Senior 4. High school was First Form, Second Form, Third Form and Fourth Form. Fifth Form, or Grade 13 (or, in today's language, Ontario Academic Credits) didn't exist yet.

The white frame school was divided into three sections: the front room was for junior grades — there were 42 students in Mr. Wright's junior room of 1938. After the partition was the high school, and in the back was the senior room. The woodshed and washrooms, girls at one end, boys at the other, was next to the school and both were reached by a long wooden boardwalk up the hill.

Mr. Wright's first teacher was Muriel Prentice, who later married Ross Harrison. Muriel Prentice's brother, Leslie, married another teacher at the school, Nina Grimstone. (Leslie Prentice has died but it's hoped Mrs. Prentice and the Harrisons will be at Saturday's reunion.) Other teachers included Miss Hanley from Burnt River, Miss Grey and Mr. Lorne Hunt. "He was teaching us when we moved into the new school."

About 75 students made their way to the school each day. At least none of them had to come extra early to light the woodstove. This job was done by James Smith, who lit the fire in the morning and cleaned the classrooms at night.

With the 12-foot-high ceilings, keeping the school warm in winter was no easy matter. "I can mind on real cold mornings the teacher would let us go sit round the boxstove," Mr. Wright says. Sometimes they had "the benefit of the thought" they might be allowed to go home because it was so cold.

Ink bottles also suffered from the frosty temperatures. On colder mornings, "the ink would freeze and become a big block of ice you couldn't get your pen in. Some of us would sit it on the stove to thaw it out and it would boil and blow the cork out."

In 1935, electricity came to Minden courtesy of the Orillia Power and Light Dam on the Gull River. However, Mr. Wright doesn't think they had power tools when they began building the new school because the children inside could hardly ever hear them working outside.

"It was of great interest to us," he says of their fascination with the construction. "When we were out for recess, we'd go out to visit it."

"To a child, anything new is exciting. And this old school didn't have electricity in it and the new one did — and flush toilets. Well, it was pretty nice. I mind we had some of the big wheels of the town at the time up there for an hour at the opening."

The construction contract had been awarded to a Mr. Thompson from Victoria Road, and Mr. Wright believes the cost was $20,000. When asked why they chose to build in stone, rather unusual in this area at the time, Mr. Wright says he isn't sure. "I suppose a stone structure is one of the more permanent types and it would cut down on fire hazards."

He does know, however, that the stone is "local."

"They bought the stone from Andrew Kernohan who lived across from the graveyard — they lived on a farm up there. I think they got it for $5 a cord, which is 128 cubic feet — 4' by 4' by 8'. Probably costs $300 a cord today."

"They drew the stone up in the winter with horses and sleighs. Horses also helped with the basement of the school. They dug it out with horses and scrapers." A scraper? "It looks something like a big scoop with two handles. It's a yard wide, has sides 18 inches deep which taper to a foot at the front, something like a snow shovel. A man holds the handle tips up so it digs down when the horses pull it. When it's full, he let's go and the horses trail it out."

One of the teams, Mr. Wright remembers, belonged to Jim Stevenson. Fortunately, the workers did not have to mix the cement by hand or horse power; "they had a little gasoline-driven cement mixer there."

Mixing the plaster for the inside walls was fascinating for young boys such as Truman. They had big wooden boxes into which they'd dump lime and cover it with water. "It boiled and bubbled and went something like porridge. You could buy hair by the bag — maybe they got it from tanneries — and they'd put that into the ground coat of plaster. That bonded it together. I can mind Garnet Stevenson dumping in a big bag of hair."

Other people who Mr. Wright can remember working on the school were George Halward of Beaverton, who boarded with the Wrights, Duncan Valentine of Norland, Buster Coutermarsh — "now don't ask me to spell Coutermarsh" — and Lloyd Smith.

But what happened to the old school? Here we turn to Bill Coneybeare who won the contract to tear it down. The squared timbers, which measured 10" by 10", were quite valuable. Mr. Coneybeare, who still lives in Minden, sold some of them to the Dominion Hotel to build an addition. Others were sold to the Ransom House, now the Rockcliffe, for its addition, and to Steve Harrison for his house on Highway 121.

Newcastle Street," which is on the right-hand-side hill on the corner as you leave the village.

When the new school opened in January, 1941, only the top floor was used. The school was built like a T, with the longest part facing Bobcaygeon Road. The northernmost room was the Senior Class, the southernmost the Junior class, and the back room was the high school.

Mr. Wright thinks it was just after the new school was built that smaller schools in the area were closed and the students "bussed" to Minden.

"They'd only amount to four or five students from each school," he remembers, citing Little Bob Lake School and Bat Lake School as ones which were closed because of small numbers. "In the summer, they'd bring them by car and in the winter they'd use horses and a small sleigh they used to call a pleasure sleigh. They built a little house on it, it looked something like today's fish hut, put a hole through it for the reigns, a little stove and benches.

"Those children had her made, we figured, and I bet they did too after they walked her."

By the time Mr. Wright graduated, one of the rooms on the ground floor was opened as well. Minden was growing, and the Minden Public and Continuation School had to grow with it.

IT'S AS IF THE SCHOOL has had three periods in its evolution thus far: the beginning, for Mr. Wright and his generation, the middle, when Bonnie-Lee Berry was still Bonnie-Lee Prentice and a student, and today, when Mrs. Prentice is a teacher at the school.

These middle years can best be summed up by two names: Harold Morgan and Archie Stouffer.

"He was the school to us," Mrs. Berry says of her former principal and Grade 8 teacher, "Jake" Morgan. "He had a wonderful sense of humour. He loved books and he read to us for 10 minutes every day and that was the highlight of the day. He was firm but he was also kind and he seemed to have a great capacity to recognize anyone who was really trying."

"It was a mutual thing," Mr. Morgan's widow Edna says early one Sunday morning as she tries to describe her husband's attachment to the school. "It wasn't so much that he was loyal to the school, but the school set the tone by being loyal to him. The community seemed to take him to heart."

Mr. Morgan was born in 1914 in Edson, Alberta but soon moved to Vancouver. A teenager, he was back in Toronto when the Depression put a hold on his education. In fact, it wasn't until 1969 that Mr.

Morgan was to receive his Bachelor of Arts degree. Many hours had been spent driving to Toronto for classes, while his wife took over his duties with Minden classes.

The two had met at the school after Mr. Morgan arrived to be principal in the 1946. She was Edna Hadley from Gooderham then, and people would often have the two of them over for dinner. In 1952 they married, and never once thought of leaving the village.

"Minden was where our destiny was," Mrs. Hadley says, firmly believing that God meant them to grow with the community. "It's just been our life here. You're woven into the fabric of the community; you just don't seem to have any choice."

They had the support of the students and school board. "We had a very up and doing school board," Mrs. Morgan says. In those days, each village had its own board, and Minden's was seen as one of the most progressive. It was the first to introduce Kindergarten and special education classes. The latter sprang from a need Mr. Morgan recognized with his daughter Elizabeth, who was mentally handicapped. She died when she was just 15, and a room was dedicated in her memory.

"We embraced change here," Mrs. Morgan says. "Harold was one of those people who wanted to see if something new was good. Instead of turning things down, he tried it. He didn't philosophize, he just went ahead and did."

What made her husband such a popular figure at the school?

"He loved teaching. He loved kids! He used his sense of humour and quick wit and that's where it's at with teaching."

He also brought his enthusiasm for the Highlands into the classroom, Mrs. Morgan adds, her voice full of pride — and longing for the husband who passed away in January. "He was an outdoors person who loved fishing and painting. He'd take the children on nature hikes and rock hikes, and that was before it was a common thing to be doing."

By the time Mr. Morgan stepped down from being principal, there were three more additions since Truman Wright's time: a stone addition to the north side of the main building, the west building, and the "middle building", linking the two wings. (Not to mention all the portables which dot the school yard.) Mr. Morgan taught for four years here until his retirement in 1974.

Mr. Morgan was at the school when it was given its new name: The Archie Stouffer Elementary School.

"Archie Stouffer was a wonderful man," Mrs. Morgan remembers of the former superintendent. "That was back in the days when it wasn't easy to get around in the county. There was no money and yet I think he made things better for the boys and girls."

"He was really Mr. Education."

Archie Stouffer was born in Stouffville in 1895, says his son John, who teaches at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School. For generations, his family had been Mennonite farmers but his mother was a teacher and must have passed on her enthusiasm to her son.

"He probably got more education than was usual among his peers and there were only so many things he could do," John Stouffer says. His father's first job was in Stouffville, then he taught at a Weston high school before moving to the Highlands in the 1930s.

Minden was chosen because he and his wife Candace, who's still living, had a cottage on Little Boshkung Lake. They loved the area and were already well aware of the ups and downs of country living.

His district included all of Haliburton County and parts of Hasting, Victoria, Peterborough and Muskoka Counties. Teachers in the outlying areas must have thought Mr. Stouffer would never drop by because the schools were inaccessible.

But they didn't know how tenacious Mr. Stouffer was. "If you wanted to travel from Haliburton to Wilberforce, that wasn't easy in the winter. He went to Kilmount and then got a ride with the section men (working for the Irondale, Bancroft and Ottawa railway.) You didn't complain about that sort of thing because there was nothing to compare it to."

When asked to describe his father, John Stouffer says "he always seemed to be a good Christian gentleman, rather a fair-minded individual who took his job seriously and did a good job of keeping the board informed of what was going on in the schools."

"He was a very gentlemanly person, very kind, nice, he always tried to be very pleasant and he was always supportive of teachers," says former Director of Education, Doug Hodgson, who believes Mr. Stouffer was instrumental in having him hired as principal of the high school.

Mr. Hodgson remembers Mr. Stouffer in three ways: as a student having Mr. Stouffer inspect his classroom; as a teacher having Mr. Stouffer watching his teaching methods; and as a supportive friend.

Only 18 when he began teaching at the Harburn school, Mr. Hodgson remembers Mr. Stouffer coming into the one, large — and only — classroom. Knowing Mr. Hodgson was green, Mr. Stouffer said "You have been working hard so now I'm going to teach all these children." At three o'clock, the children were let out early and the two men talked about what made a good teacher.

"He was one of these people who can accept people as they are and try to make more of them. He reigned instead of ruled," Mr. Hodgson says. "I counted him as a good friend and he was the kind of man you could respect."

Mr. Stouffer died in 1982. It's believed the school was named in his honour some time in the mid-1960s.

After Harold Morgan stepped down, Don Wright, Stuart Baker and McKay Brydon were its principals. Hundreds of children have passed through the doors and there are now 617 students and 61 staff members — and still more space is needed, especially as Kindergarten and Grade 1 classes are at the former IGA store.

Each one of these people will have their own special memories, and it's hoped they'll be at the reunion on Saturday to share them.

Differences more than geographical

'It's a way to mature more because if something comes up, you have to take care of it,' says Minden's Rotary Exchange student

Youth group welcomes all

Pastor Brian Plouffe of Lakeside Baptist Church invites junior high aged children to a new youth group that is set to start on Friday September 28th at 7:07 p.m. at J.D. Hodgson Elementary schools gymnasium. This new interdenominational group for 12-16 year old children will be called "Club 707" and will meet on the last Friday of every month. Its aim is to provide junior high aged kids with a good clean night of fast-paced fun as well as to tell them about the love of Jesus Christ.

A variety of "wild and crazy" games will be played every month and skits and special music will also be featured on occasion. (A teenage singing group called "Life Line Singers" will be our special guests on Sept. 28th). Each night will end with snack food and pop and a short but creative challenge to seriously consider the claims of Jesus Christ. No "altar calls" or attempts to recruit teenagers to join any particular church will ever be made.

Parents are more than welcome to sit in on the night or help with the refreshments and the rides for the kids. If you have any questions or input please contact Pastor Plouffe at 457-2851 or 457-1470.

Denmark's, Canada's cultures compared

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

ONE WOULD THINK that a teenager living thousands of kilometres away from her parents would be intoxicated by the sense of freedom. But Anette Busk-Rasmussen is finding that in some ways, she's left freedom behind in Denmark.

The 16-year-old exchange student is discovering that more than geography is at play in setting countries apart.

"It's more free in Denmark," Anette says during her lunch break at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School. "I could go into a grocery store if I wanted so. Or you can go to a disco and no one would say anything. I could bet you you wouldn't meet a 14-year-old kid who hadn't been drunk once in their life."

Attitudes towards drinking differ in that no one makes a big fuss over alcohol — unless one is boasting about one of Denmark's claim to fame, schnapps. Most children would share a drink with their parents at mealtime and because it's not illegal, there's no challenge to the rules.

"Some parents are a bit itchy about it, though," Anette says. While many Danes drink, some get a bit "heavy when they're drunk" and that's not always welcome.

One advantage of such tolerance is that it lets teenagers act foolish before their behaviour can be dangerous.

"It gives us a chance to mature so we don't have to stand like total idiots when we're older. We can't get our driver's license until we're 18. Before that we've tried to get drunk so we won't go out and drink and drive. We shouldn't be that stupid."

Those who are that stupid can be penalized by being sent to a youth jail.

Danes are also more free in attitudes about sex. Sixteen year olds can see restricted movies in Denmark "so I was a bit surprised you have to be 18 in Canada."

This isn't to say Anette wishes she was back in Denmark. Differences are to be welcomed and explored when you're the Minden Rotary exchange student.

Anette comes from the city of Odense (she pronounces it onze), a city of 175,000 on the island of Fyn. Her father Bo has a dealership of Perkins engines and her mother Birte stays at home. Her one sister is 27 and has a family of her own.

A bridge links the island to the mainland of Jutland, at the tip of which is Skagen. Here, where the North Sea and the Baltic Sea met in a rush of waves, is one of Denmark's most popular tourist attractions. The Danes like it, too.

"I love it, it's very beautiful," says Anette, her voice warming to her subject. "It looks tough — there are no trees and sand going up like mountains."

The rest of the country's topography is fairly flat, with small rolling hills. Its distinctness is its links with the sea and the fjords along the coastline. "A lot of people don't appreciate (their beauty) because they're used to them."

Seasons are less dramatic than here. Temperatures might dip to -10 in the winter, but in summer they won't go much above 20 degrees.

There are other, minor differences. The most popular sport in Denmark is soccer, and "we don't play baseball and touchdown football." Along with their schnapps at dinner, people like frikadeller. That's spoonfuls of ground pork mixed with onions, egg and flour and fried.

"We live in Western Europe so we have the same things as Canada," Anette adds. There is some American influence there as well. "Boys want American cars and girls like some of the dresses and clothing. But it's not like we want to be like Americans. We just like some of the same things."

Those things include music. "I couldn't live without music," Anette says. An eclectic listener, she likes the Beatles, Pink Floyd and also some heavy metal. Traditional Danish music is left to the older generations.

She was surprised that some teenaged boys here have "long hair and heavy t-shirts. It's a long time since I've seen that."

Here teenagers talk a lot about last weekend's party. Danish teenagers talk about parties too, but then

The beauty of pewter shines out at gallery

AT THE GALLERY

by: HOLLY G. HUTCHISON

PEWTERWORKINGS, on exhibit at the Rails' End Gallery from September 15 to October 13 and guest-curated by Lois Etherington Betteridge, an internationally renowned metalsmith, is an invitational exhibition of pewter hollowware and jewellery created by contemporary Canadian pewterers, metalsmiths and jewellers.

Work made of pewter, originating from the 17th, 18th, and 19th Centuries in Canada are sparsely represented in collections and museums. Pewter's silver-like appearance, inexpensiveness as a metal and its ability to be easily melted and hammered made it a metal for the poor. Consequently, itinerant pewterers cast new pewter spoons from old and melted and reformed broken vessels. Perhaps it is for these reasons that so few historic works have endured the Colonial period in Canada.

Contemporary pewter workers in Canada are actively establishing pewtering as a visible craft. The origins of contemporary Canadian pewter works can be traced to Rudy Renzius, who was an accomplished metalsmith when he immigrated to Canada from Sweden in the 1930s. Over the years, Renzius and metalsmiths Andrew Fussell and Harold Stacey took apprentices into their studios, and due to their interest in pewter and the interest of their apprentices such as Douglas Shenstone, who was preoccupied with pewter, that we are now seeing their efforts come to fruition in over twenty practising pewterers scattered throughout Eastern Canada.

PewterWorking introduces to the public, the works of Canadian pewterers who tend to be scattered throughout the greater craft scene and who, to Lois Betteridge's knowledge, have never been presented as a distinct group except in the province of New Brunswick. This exhibition will encourage other metalsmiths to explore their ideas in pewter thus helping to establish dialogues between the traditional designer, the contemporary designer and the public.

PewterWorkings is a touring exhibition and will be installed in galleries across Canada during 1990, 1991 and possibly 1992.

An Artists' Reception will be held on Saturday, September 22nd from 7:30 p.m. until 10 p.m. Many of the participating artists and the Guest Curator, Lois Betteridge, will be in attendance. The Gallery and Guild would like to extend a warm welcome to the residents and visitors of Haliburton County.

Now in its third year, the Haliburton County Studio Tour invites tourists, permanent and seasonal residents a unique opportunity to visit studios, meet and talk with participants, view the latest works of Haliburton artists and craftspeople. This year, twenty three studios are participating in the Tour, ranging from weaving to pottery to painting to jewellery studios. The Studio Tour is organized and funded by the participating artists.

The Rails' End Gallery is hosting a preview of works by the participating artists from September 15 to September 30. Each artist will be represented. This exhibition is your opportunity to see works ahead of time, to plan your touring route and to support your arts community. The exhibition will run for two weeks previous to the Tour.

There will be a reception for Pewter-workings on Saturday night at the Rail's End Gallery in Haliburton. All are welcome turn their attention elsewhere. "We talk about politics, history, law, sailing and sports and we also talk about the parties. But we only talk about it for an hour." Here they talk about it all the time.

Making friends in Minden and Haliburton is difficult, partly because Anette is shy. But distance is a bigger stumbling block. In Denmark she only has to hop on her bicycle to visit a friend. Here, with kilometres separating friends, you need someone to drive you.

However, Canada was her first choice and she's glad to be living in a small town. "I'm tired of the noise of the city," she says. "I was making jokes about (coming to Minden with its 1,500 inhabitants), but I don't mind anymore. It has its charms. There's only one main street and you can walk down it and know most of the people."

Anette believes any challenges she faces will only strengthen her. Her main goal is "to improve my English and sort of open up. I wanted to come to Canada to travel and see another part of the world."

"It's also a way to mature more, because you're on your own and if something comes up, you have to take care of it."

When she returns home, Anette will probably go to a gymnasium (a mix between college and high school) and study languages. Then, the rest of the future, and the world, will be up for grabs.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Students take off for camp

STUDENT LIFE AT HHSS

by: ERIN LYNCH

SOME STUDENTS were very fortunate to be able to attend the training weekend for Sunship Earth at Camp Wanakita this past weekend. Sunship Earth is a program in which some Grade 12 and OAC biology and English students are crew counsellors. The program is designed for Grade 6 students who have an experience that will shape the way they look at the natural world. This is summed up in the formula that everyone participating in Sunship Earth knows: EC DC IC A. Energy flow, Cycles, Diversity, Change, Interrelationships, Community and Adaptation are all learned in this four-day camp that runs from the end of September to the end of October.

Not only is it a learning experience for the children but also for the high school students who learn more about leadership and responsibility. It reinforces their ties with nature and they realize how important their planet actually is. This is an excellent program and we are very fortunate to have it. We can especially thank Mr. Mowat (Buluga) who helps to organize it all for our school.

The Redmen Junior and Senior Football teams had their first game last Friday, an exhibition game against Bancroft. Haliburton outplayed the visitors, scoring an 18-0 win for the juniors and a 32-0 victory for the seniors. The first official football game is this Friday, Red and White day, when the school gets out for the whole afternoon to cheer the teams on. Remember to attend the victory dance this Friday night as well.

Chocolate bar sales will be starting this week. As in other years, there will be prizes for the most chocolate bars sold by home forms and individual students, so try and sell as many as possible.

The Civic Action Group of Kinmount will be sponsoring a Roast Beef Dinner/Fashion Show on Friday, September 21 at the Kinmount Community Hall. There will be a social hour from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. with dinner following at 7:00 p.m. Admission $10.00 per person. Should be a great evening!

Don't forget the Galway Firefighters Monte Carlo Night at 8:00 p.m. September 22 at the Galway Hall.

I had very enjoyable telephone visits with some Kinmount friends recently, "Ronnie" Brelsford and Barb McCluney. It was particularly nice seeing your two lovely daughters in the paper recently, "Ronnie" and congratulations too, to Zoie Rolfe, daughter of Wayne and Jane Rolfe of Kinmount. Zoie is the Kinmount Fair Queen for 1990.

Happy birthday to Sherrie Palmer September 11, Marg Michel September 19, Darryl Palmer September 21.

Norland Area Seniors bowling started up again at the Fenelon Lanes on Wednesday, September 12. Everyone is welcome to come out and join in the fun. Starting time 1:30 p.m.

Norland Area Seniors held its first executive meeting under the new panel on Thursday, September 13. Arlene Holden will be Crafts administrator, Marjorie Lee and Aggie Brown—Victoria County Seniors, Gus Boyd—bus, George Crisp—membership, Alice Huras and Marion Horton—social. It was suggested that the dances be reinstated. Possibly more on that later. Rotha Bryant very kindly offered storage space for the Seniors finished craft works. A tentative date of November 27 was set for a bus trip to Newmarket. The Christmas dinner December 5 and a bazaar to be held November 3 plus the New Years Eve dance were all on the agenda. Watch here for further details.

The Norland Seniors, some 42 in number, thoroughly enjoyed a bus trip to Kawartha Downs in Peterborough on Saturday, September 8. A delicious roast beef dinner was enjoyed by all.

The next executive meeting will be October 18 at the Community Hall.

We were sorry to hear of Alice Pearson's very serious illness. Alice has been in hospital in Kingston but at present is on pass at her Trenton home. She previously had been a bus driver bringing the school children in from Kawartha.

Well folks, give me a call at 454-2395 with your news for this column.

Believe it or not — it snowed!

The Monmouth Senior Citizen Club members meet every Tuesday at 12:30 in the Lloyd Watson

Centre. They are a friendly group who are always happy to welcome newcomers. Flo Elliott sends us this report of a recent outing: Mrs. Alfretta O'Rourke hosted a picnic for the Monmouth Senior's Club on Tues. Sept. 11, at 1:00 o'clock. Members and guests gathered under

COMMUNITY NEWS

Moms and children enjoy opportunity to visit and play

DORSET NEWS

by: PHYLLIS BRISCOE

We send birthday wishes to Ann MacDonald of Huntsville, who celebrates on the 18th, and to Helen Sutton whose special day is the 19th.

The Co-op Play Group got started on Monday September 10th at the Dorset Elementary School. This group is for Moms and children from babyhood to Kindergarten and is held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week from 9:30 to 11:30 and is a chance for Mothers to visit and compare notes, and for the little ones to associate with their own age group. Two days a week there is a planned program the third morning open. This year there will be a Duty Mom for each morning. There will be a meeting for the Mothers at Cedar Narrows Restaurant on Tuesday, September 18 at 7:30 to plan and discuss programs.

The Lions bingo is over for another season and will be missed by many. The last game was on Thursday, August 30th and the jackpot of $100 had to go, so there was a full house. The lucky winner was Millie McEachern of Paint Lake.

The Dorset Brownies, Guides and Pathfinders held registration on Tuesday, September 18 at the Dorset Community Centre. Registration fee is $20. There is also a need for a new Brown Owl for the pack. If you are interested in having lots of fun with a program for girls aged 6-9 please come out and talk about it on registration night or call Kelly Dirard at 766-2011.

H.H. To eliminate the peculiar odor that arises from a vase that contains water and marigolds after a few days, add a teaspoonful of sugar to the water.

beautiful sunny skies and enjoyed a delicious and bountiful lunch. We then played games and were entertained by Rusty Carroll, Alfretta's brother-in-law, with some amusing recitations.

The bag race was won by Irma Dunford, the artful dodger, who managed not to get left holding the bag, even once, unlike some others who were dressed to the nines. Gerald Shackleton's hat was especially fetching. There was stiff competition for the Hog Calling contest but Ethel Deterling, finally won with her imitation of an insane chicken, at least that's what I think it was. She was either trying to lay an egg or crow. However, this is only one of Ethel's talents. She can also do backflips off picnic benches. At the end of the day a small gift was presented to Mrs. O'Rourke. We all agreed it had been an especially enjoyable afternoon. The Club thanks Alfretta for her gracious hospitality.

Euchre fans will find interesting games taking place at Highland Grove every Monday night starting at 8 p.m. at the community Centre. You will meet players from many parts of the area and enjoy a tasty luncheon. Everyone is glad to see Annie Rowley back again.

Perhaps you are a bridge fan, in which case you should visit the Tory Hill Community Centre on Tuesday evenings at 7:30 and become acquainted with players who come from many directions including Gooderham, Haliburton, Cardiff and Wilberforce. These hospitable folks also serve a lunch.

A bridal shower will be held for Susan Rivers at the Tory Hill Recreation Centre on Sept. 22, at 7:30 p.m.

It is time for another book exchange at your Library. Drop in and discover the fine selection of novels, mysteries, biographies, information on cooking, building, crafts and hobbies. Delightful, illustrated children's books, large print and talking books also available. Something for every taste.

We all wish a quick recovery for Ron Mufford, now a patient in a Kingston Hospital.

Deanery means busy time

If you have copies of The Echo in the '50s or '60s, they would be of interest to the Museum. Tom Ballantyne would like to have a look at older copies. They are always of interest to people who walk through the museum noting when events happened in the various communities in Dysart et al.

Donna Hunter of Toronto was guest speaker at Victoria-Haliburton's Deanery Council meeting on Thursday evening at St. Andrew's Anglican.

On Sept. 20th the Anglican Church Women will be gathering at St. Margaret's in Wilberforce for the annual fall Deanery meeting for the Victoria-Haliburton area. The speaker will be Mrs. Jean McCallum of Toronto who is knowledgeable on all aspects of chancel work and history. All women are welcome to attend. The day begins with registration and a service of communion in the morning conducted by the Rev. John Phillips.

The following was contributed by Elva Heard: On Sept. 5 a bridal shower was held at the Eagle Lake Community Church for Susan Heard. It was given by Mrs. Eileen Heard and Mrs. Sharon Griffin. Susan is to be married at the Eagle Lake Church on October 6, 4 p.m. to Mr. Carl Anderson of Kinnmount. The shower was entertaining in the playing of games and the prizes which were won by Susan, Karlene Cooney and Nancy Brink. Nancy's prize was a beautiful vase full of flowers! The bride-to-be was assisted in the opening of her beautiful gifts by her bridesmaid, Sharon Griffin. Susan thanked each guest and assured them that every gift would be put to good use. The delicious lunch was served by Sharon and Eileen and Elva Heard poured tea. All of us wish Susan and Carl much happiness.

Fundamental #3:

"Pssst!... WANNA BUY A HOUSE?"

Surely, this would not be a wise approach to selling your house. More to the point: if you were a buyer, would you even consider such a "proposition"? We think not. The sale of a home occurs three, maybe four times, in a lifetime, and involves many experts at each stage of the transaction. REALTORS are an essential part of that process.

REALTORS adhere to a strict Code of Ethics; their services thus ensure that your most important asset - your home - is handled professionally, so that your expectations are met. ... that can make a REAL difference!
